Hospital takes bid for local facility before state panel

The Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital will make its pitch for a satellite facility near Buffalo Grove and Wheeling at Wednesday's meeting of the state hospital licensing board in Springfield.

The hospital has gathered sufficient data on the proposed 223-bed satellite branch to be placed on the licensing board's agenda. Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passolt will accompany hospital representatives for the hearing.

A decision on whether to license the new facility may be reached Wednesday. Hospital representatives, however, said state approval will be less likely if the satellite branch is not approved at this meeting.

"If we don't get it in this April, it's going to be much tougher for us," said hospital consultant Norman Davis. "The feeling in the state is that we don't need more hospitals. I'd say our hopes are based on April."

THE FRANKLIN Boulevard group will be given about 30 minutes to present plans for the satellite project. Members of the licensing board will then ask questions, and possibly vote on the matter.

If approved, the facility will be built on 10 acres south of Wheeling on the east side of Schoenbeck Road between Dundee and Hintz Roads. The hospital has an option to purchase this property and is negotiating with other nearby property owners to expand the site.

In preparation for the meeting, Davis has compiled an extensive report outlining the potential need for a hospital in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area. The report includes statistics on current medical habits in Wheeling, projected population figures, data on staffing the facility and a survey of the area's professional medical community.

The Franklin Boulevard representatives have also provided information on zoning, utilities service, road access and other technical data reviewed by the licensing board.

A hospital spokesman said he is not aware of any groups planning to oppose the satellite branch at the meeting Wednesday. He said, however, that regional health-care planning groups may speak out against the project.

MEMBERS OF the Wheeling community have generally favored the hospital project. Village board members repeatedly have spoken out for the Wheeling-area hospital branch, and several community groups have also endorsed the idea.

THE HOSPITAL is being planned to serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove as a primary area, with Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and sections of Lake County providing the secondary service area.

Decisions about the type of services offered by the satellite branch have been delayed until state approval is granted. Currently, however, Franklin Boulevard is not planning to provide either a pediatrics or a maternity ward in the proposed facility.

Pediatrics cases would be handled in private or semi-private rooms, unless there is sufficient community demand for a full pediatrics ward. Prenatal maternity care would be available, but delivery would be scheduled at other nearby hospitals except in emergency cases.

ARMED WITH SIGNS: Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

Heliport denial stand maintained

The Wheeling Environmental Commission is standing firm in its opposition to approval of a heliport for the Asplundh Tree Expert Co., 412 N. Milwaukee Ave.

William Rogers, commission chairman, said the advisory board will continue to recommend denying the heliport request at zoning hearings scheduled for tonight at the village hall. He said statements by Asplundh employees that the company has already received FAA approval do not change the opinion of the commission.

"The approval of the FAA does not necessarily mean it should be granted," Rogers said of the heliport zoning. "It is up to the village authorities. It is up to the zoning board and the board of trustees to allow zoning. The permit carries very little weight if the authorities do not want a heliport."

VILLAGE PRES. Ted C. Scanlon, an employee of Asplundh, said he will not participate in any decision on the heliport.

The environmental commission has recommended denying the Asplundh request for heliport zoning because of safety hazards, lack of village control over its operation, hours of flight, noise problems and emergency usage.

Rogers said he visited with Earl Reynolds, vice president of Asplundh, to see the FAA permits for the heliport. He said the statement permit dates back to 1968, and said he is not sure that the FAA permit is currently valid.

An FAA spokesman, however, said there is a current permit for the heliport, and said the FAA has conducted periodic safety inspections at the Mayer and Milwaukee avenues site.

"The environmental commission is not just concerned about the FAA permit because that is secondary in every respect," Rogers said. He said such permits are granted on a routine basis.

COMMISSION MEMBERS reviewed the site according to FAA regulations and found several obstacles conflicting with these safety codes, Rogers said. He said the FAA review may not have included consideration of these obstacles.

Asplundh employees, however, have said the FAA would not have granted the permit if the obstacles were a safety hazard. The company wants the heliport so it can do maintenance on its own helicopters, which are used to patrol electric utility lines for various companies in the Midwest.

A large number of residents are also expected to voice opposition to the heliport request at tonight's hearings. A group of residents living near the proposed heliport have already submitted petitions against the project.

THE HELIPORT has been a recurring issue since 1968, when Asplundh first requested a change in village zoning codes. When the heliport ordinance was first proposed, there were six heliports in the village. After the village board voted 5-1 against the ordinance, all such operations became illegal.

Asplundh tried again in 1970 to have the matter reopened so a heliport could be built. The board once again turned down the request, with Scanlon casting the deciding vote in a 4-3 decision. Scanlon was not employed by the company at that time.

The Asplundh helicopters are now housed at Palwaukee Airport. Maintenance of the helicopters is allowed in the storage hangar by a mechanic on the Asplundh payroll. Asplundh, however, has maintained that the hangars are not heated and too small for proper repair work.

The zoning board will also consider zoning requests for a sign variation at the corner of Dundee and George roads and a car wash on Dundee Road west of the Wheeling Drainage Ditch. Hearings will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down. Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Hearing recessed until May 21

Only 1 testifies at incorporation hearing

One witness, a land surveyor, took the stand Monday as testimony began in the hearing to determine whether residents of unincorporated Prospect Heights will be allowed to vote to create a City of Prospect Heights.

Testimony by Robert Carlson of Wheeling, however, will be the only testimony heard until May 21. The hearing was continued to that date and not the previously agreed upon April 29 because of the unavailability of Jack Siegel, attorney for the objecting Village of Arlington Heights.

Carlson testified to the proposed municipality's boundaries. He also said the area of the proposed town would be under the four-square-mile limit. Carlson was a witness for the incorporation petitioners, the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn.

Six of the seven attorneys representing objectors cross examined Carlson. Their questions dealt with Carlson's qualifications as an "expert witness," the lack of a field survey on the proposed incorporation area and the inclusion of areas east of the Camp McDonald-Wolf roads intersection.

IN THE QUESTIONING, it was pointed out that a person could travel to Palwaukee Airport, which is partially included within the proposed boundaries, and stay within Prospect Heights, but a person could not drive from the airport to the west part of Prospect Heights without going through Wheeling. This is because Wheeling only annexed half the width of Wolf and Camp McDonald roads near their intersection.

Group to make plans for Bicentennial

Plans for Wheeling's celebration of the nation's Bicentennial will be discussed at a community meeting at 8 p.m. April 23. The Wheeling Woman's Club is calling the meeting to gather ideas for the celebration of the country's 200th birthday. Patrick Murray of the Illinois Bicentennial Commission will speak.

Club members are hoping that a steering committee will be formed of various community groups and residents attending the meeting at the old church in Chamber of Commerce Park.

For further information residents can call 537-1928 or 537-7971.

Prior to the testimony, stipulations were entered into the record in which Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Northbrook acknowledged no land incorporated by them was the subject of any pending annexation within the proposed boundaries. Arlington Heights also made that stipulation but added that three lots, not now contiguous to Arlington Heights, are the subject of pre-annexation agreements to be consummated when they are contiguous. Two of the lots are on West McDonald Road and the third is on Waterman Avenue, south of Willow Road.

Present at the hearing were Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann and Village Eng. Bernard Hemminger. Mount Prospect is an objector.

Pistol reported stolen

Police are investigating the theft of a .38 cal. pistol from Harold Langos of Your Pie House, 335 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Langos said the gun and six shells were discovered missing from a desk drawer Saturday.

Young calling Mikva's bluff

Abner Mikva of Evanston, 10th District congressional challenger, has a reputation as a reformer but U.S. Rep. Samuel Young (R-10th) is going to try to beat it in this year's rematch of their 1972 election contest. "I am calling Mikva's bluff," said Young, proposing a $100,000 spending limit for each candidate and a ban on contributions from persons who neither live nor work in the North Shore 10th District. "Ridiculous," said Mikva. "I don't have $100,000 friends like Stone or Terra who live in the district," he said, referring to insurance tycoon W. Clement Stone and chemical company executive Daniel Terra, who both contributed to Young's 1972 campaign.

In other proposed reforms, Young said he wants a $3,000 contribution limit from any single contributor and a $10,000 limit on aid from either party's congressional campaign committee. With spending limits, Young said, the candidates could hire fewer paid workers. "Both of us would have to depend on volunteers, but that is all right, let's keep it to volunteers," he said.

Hospital plans to state board

Plans for a new hospital near Wheeling will be presented Wednesday to the state hospital licensing board in Springfield. Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago wants to build a 223-bed satellite hospital south of the village on Schoenbeck Road. Hospital representatives hope for a decision at tomorrow's meeting, which will be held in Springfield. A Franklin Boulevard spokesman said he is not aware of any opposition to the proposal, but added that regional health care groups may speak out against the project.

Peskin sentencing May 21

Bernard M. Peskin, attorney convicted in the Hoffman Estates zoning scandal, will be sentenced May 21 by U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr. A federal jury found Peskin guilty Thursday on seven counts of bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion. He faces a maximum penalty of 33 years in prison and $65,000 in fines. Judge McGarr has ordered a presentence report on Peskin's health and gave his attorney, Thomas P. Sullivan, 15 days to file post-trial motions. An appeal of the guilty verdict is expected.

Torres charged with murder

Daniel Torres, 37, of 2845 Higgins Rd., Elk Grove Township, was ordered held without bond Monday in the shooting death early Sunday of a Chicago man, Hector Cardona, 24. Torres was charged with murder by Cook County Sheriff's police after the early morning shooting in Torres' house trailer. He allegedly shot Cardona when Cardona and another man showed up at the trailer to see Torres' daughter, Felicitia, 30, who was not home at the time, police said. Associate Circuit Court Judge James Maher refused to set bond for Torres who will appear April 16 in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Race track eyes profits

Officials of Arlington Park Race Track, beset with falling attendance and profits in recent years, are hoping for their best season since 1968. Total revenue at the track dropped some $4.6 million between 1969 and 1973 and net profits were down almost $2 million. This year, with choice summer racing dates, expectations of first class horses and jockeys and some increased purses, "things look very, very bright," said William A. Thayer, Jr., general manager and vice president. Arlington Park opens June 3 and closes Sept. 7, after the Labor Day holiday.

'Dishonest' report charged

School accreditation team on thin ice

by WANDALYN RICE

The organization that accredits area high schools and colleges stands to lose its own recognition from the federal government as a result of charges by a Michigan community college that an accreditation team wrote a "dishonest" report.

A hearing on the charges against North Central Assn. of Colleges and Secondary Schools, made by officials of Southwestern Michigan College in Dowagiac, Mich., will be held in Washington D.C. May 22-24. If the panel hearing the charges finds that the association violated federal criteria for accreditation bodies, the association could lose its federal recognition.

Loss of federal recognition would mean that schools accredited by North Central could no longer depend on accreditation to qualify them for federal funds, according to Ronald Pugsley, chief of the accreditation policy unit of the U.S. Office of Education.

The impact of such a federal action, Pugsley said, "would initially be severe on some institutions."

However, Pugsley said that loss of federal recognition would not necessarily mean North Central could not act as an accrediting body. "There are some accrediting agencies that are not recognized," Pugsley said. "The American Association of Law Schools is not recognized. There are many uses for accreditation besides qualification for federal funds."

THE CHARGES by officials of Southwestern Michigan stem from an evaluation report made by a three-man team sent to the campus by the North Central Assn. in May, 1973. One member of the team was Guerin Fischer, vice president for student affairs at Harper College in Palatine.

The team, according to Fred Matthews, chairman of the Southwestern Michigan board of trustees, wrote a report which "was a premeditated, cold-blooded attempt to politically weaken our board of trustees."

Following the team's visit, Matthews said, the board voted to "expel" the North Central Assn. from the college and filed charges with the U.S. Office of Education, alleging that North Central had violated four of the 12 federal criteria for accrediting bodies.

The criteria North Central is alleged to have violated relate to conduct and qualifications of the evaluation team, acquiring sufficient information on the school's quality and making the North Central's criteria for evaluating a school public.

CENTRAL TO the dispute, Matthews said, is the fact that the board of trustees believes the North Central team deliberately wrote a report siding with the college teachers' union, which was then involved in collective bargaining with the board.

"They (North Central) don't understand collective bargaining at all," Matthews said. "One of the criteria for accreditation is that you must have high faculty morale, so the union leaders can go to the team and say morale is low and use it against the board. It has become a strategy of unions in Michigan to use accreditation reports in collective bargaining."

Fischer said that he and other members of the evaluation team have agreed to let North Central answer the charges. However, he did say, "We made our report as fairly and honestly as we could — and it was not that unfavorable to Southwestern." He added, "In our opinion what they were doing in collective negotiations had nothing to do with the report."

Norman Burns, director of the North Central Assn., said he could not respond to specific charges made by Southwestern, since "the whole thing is still very much up in the air."

Recount of RTA vote in 900 precincts to be sought today

by STEVE FORSYTH

An estimated 900 precincts in Chicago and Cook County will be the target of a major recount effort by suburban legislators opposed to the Regional Transportation Authority. Cook County recount requests are to be filed today, the opponents said.

State Rep. Cal Skinner, R-Crystal Lake, said only nine precincts in Lake, McHenry, DuPage, Will and Kane counties will be recounted at a cost of $5 each. The Chicago precincts have been selected because totals looked irregular to the RTA foes or because an abnormal number of spoiled ballots was reported.

A discovery recount should allow about 25 per cent of the precincts in each county to be checked, although the RTA opponents are concerned they may be stopped by the courts because of wording in election laws. The laws are written specifically for contested elections, and are unclear on referenda, the opponents say.

IF CHALLENGED, however, Skinner said they will appeal a ruling against them. Meanwhile, money is being raised to pay for the recounts and possible court costs.

Action against the March 19 RTA referendum began last weekend after the State Board of Elections certified final results giving the RTA a margin of 12,989 votes. The certification was announced Friday. If a discovery recount shows significant changes, a complete recount would be requested.

State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, another anti-RTA leader, said close to $5,000 has been raised to cover the cost of the recounts. Skinner said he has collected about $700, with $600 more promised by the McHenry County Republican Organization.

RTA opponents spent the weekend going over sheets of vote totals precinct by precinct, to determine those that appeared to be irregular. The lists were obtained, after some difficulty, from the Cook County Republican Organization, Skinner said.

GEORGE RANNEY JR., former head of RTA Citizens Committee for Better Transportation, which promoted the referendum, said he is not worried about the recount. "We have no indications there were any problems in any one particular place," he said.

He said he is delighted the county board chairmen are proceeding with plans to appoint RTA board members, rather than making charges of irregularities.

When asked about possible appointments to the RTA board, Ranney said, "I don't think it should necessarily be people with transportation experience."

As for specific names, Ranney said he has a high regard for Alexander MacArthur of Barrington Hills, former Racing Board chairman, and for Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh, both of whom have been mentioned for the board.

Former Riverside Township Committeeman Joe Tecson, who worked to pass the RTA referendum, also has been mentioned. Ranney said he thinks Tecson also is a good choice.

2 policemen die in traffic accident

Two Chicago police officers were killed yesterday when their speeding patrol car, in pursuit of a traffic violator, hit a vegetable truck at an intersection, hurling it through the air and into a utility pole. The dead are Patrolmen William Bodnar Jr., 24 and Thomas Wodarczyk, 33. The auto they were pursuing was found abandoned a short time later.

2 firemen hurt, 20 families homeless

A five-alarm fire which destroyed a four-story warehouse and spread to six other buildings caused minor injury to two firemen and left 20 families homeless in Chicago yesterday. Wind spread the warehouse fire across Polk Street and Karlov Avenue, igniting buildings as it went. The blaze hit a four-story apartment and five single-family dwellings.

Move over Babe, Aaron hits 715

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron last night hit his 715th home run to break Babe Ruth's lifetime record. Aaron, who took the first step of this near incredible climb nearly 20 years ago, crossed the final mountain top in the fourth inning of the Atlanta Braves-Los Angeles Dodgers contest before a hometown crowd. The Braves beat the Dodgers 7 to 4.

Southpaw Al Downing was the victim of Aaron's record-breaker, serving up the second home run of the season to the 40-year-old Braves' superstar on a 1-and-0 pitch.

Aaron's climactic wallop came on his second time at bat and in his first swing of the night. He had walked on a 3-and-1 pitch leading off the second inning and scored the Braves' first run of the game in that frame.

With the Braves trailing 3-1, Darrell Evans was safe on an error by Dodger shortstop Bill Russell opening the fourth. Downing then came in with a curve ball as his first pitch to Aaron which was low and the crowd of 50,000 boomed its disapproval.

On the next pitch, Aaron brought those marvelous miracle wrists of his into play. The ball took off on a blurred line toward the left field fence and, unlike what occurred in Cincinnati last Thursday when the crowd sat in stunned silence upon watching Aaron's 714th homer, the fans at Atlanta Stadium roared their approval before Aaron's 715th even cleared the fence.

Fireworks immediately went off and the game was halted as two young fans raced out of the stands to accompany Aaron on his trip around the bases. All his Braves teammates awaited him at home plate and swirled around him to shake his hand.

ATLANTA BRAVES' slugger Hank Aaron is hugged by his mother after he hit his record breaking 715th home run off Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Al Downing in the 4th inning last night.

Nixon signs minimum wage measure

PRESIDENT NIXON and Labor Secretary Peter Brennan share a light moment following the President's signing of the minimum wage bill raising the pay of nearly 57 million Americans to $2 an hour for the first time.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Monday raising the minimum wage in three steps from the current $1.60 to $2.30 an hour and extending its coverage to domestic servants and governmental employees.

It will be raised to $2 an hour May 1, to $2.10 an hour Jan. 1, 1975, and to $2.30 an hour Jan. 1, 1976.

Approving a bill almost identical to one he vetoed only seven months ago, Nixon included in minimum wage coverage for the first time domestic service employees, with the exception of baby sitters and paid companions, all state and local government workers and retail service workers employed by chain stores.

All told, between 7 and 8 million workers never before covered now will be, bringing 54 million Americans under the minimum wage law.

The law also will extend provisions requiring payment of overtime in excess of 40 hours a week to 3 million workers not covered — mostly in hotels, restaurants, nursing homes, bowling alleys and similar businesses.

It also will extend overtime provisions to policemen and firemen, but under a different formula.

The measure had passed the House and Senate by large majorities and although the administration was not entirely satisfied with it, there appeared little chance of congressional opponents sustaining a presidential veto.

Nixon skipped an elaborate signing ceremony and the only ones present for the historic presidential signature were Labor Secretary Peter Brennan and Nixon's assistant, Kenneth Cole.

The President removed one pen from a box and signed the bill. He slid the pen across the desk to Brennan, picked the bill up in his right hand and tossed it into an out box on the corner of his desk.

In a written statement, Nixon said, "On the whole, $2.747 contains more good than bad and I have concluded that the best interests of the American people will be served by signing it into law."

Stable Israeli government flounders

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir's cabinet split Monday, unable to agree whether the whole cabinet or only Defense Minister Moshe Dayan should resign to take the blame for Israel's unpreparedness for the October war.

Mrs. Meir's cabinet remained in office. The head of her ruling Labor Party said, however, that no solution can be found "to maintain a stable government."

In the confused situation resulting from the split, the national radio, quoting party sources, said the possibility existed that Mrs. Meir may resign and not agree to try to form a new government. But the national television said she is not enthusiastic about resigning.

The statement by the party's secretary general, Aharon Yadin, came after a series of closed door meetings between Labor Party factions in efforts to heal the rift over whether the entire cabinet or only Dayan should resign.

"There seems to be no formula acceptable to all sections of the party which would make it possible to maintain a stable government," Yadin told newsmen at Labor Party headquarters. "I can't say we have succeeded in bridging the gap between our two positions."

He said the crisis will reach its climax before the Knesset parliament meets Thursday to debate the report by a special government commission that put the responsibility for Israel's unpreparedness on top army men and cleared Mrs. Meir and Dayan. The cabinet split centers on a demand by at least six cabinet ministers who want Dayan to quit.

Meanwhile, Israel lost its first warplane on the northern front since the October war Monday when a two-seater jet crashed in flames over the Golan Heights. Syria said the plane was shot down; Israel said it crashed because of a "technical mishap."

The two-man crew bailed out and landed in nearby Lebanon where Arab newsmen said they were taken into custody by Lebanese authorities.

On the ground, Israel reported the capture of the first Syrian prisoner during the 28th consecutive day of artillery and tank battles.

Judiciary unit awaits word on evidence

From Herald news services
Chief counsel John Doar of the House Judiciary Committee announced Monday that presidential attorney James St. Clair had assured him the White House would answer by Tuesday the committee's demand for 41 additional White House tapes and documents.

The committee's Democrats meanwhile were prepared to seek a subpoena for the White House tapes should St. Clair not be willing to turn over all the committee insists it must have to complete its inquiry into possible grounds for impeaching President Nixon.

Doar also announced that the committee staff has asked for Nixon's income tax returns for 1969-72, the years the IRS said he owed about $470,000 in back taxes and interest, as part of its inquiry into grounds for impeachment. Doar said the staff was already studying the report of a joint House-Senate committee that found Nixon owed $476,000 in back taxes, and that the committee had agreed to hand over its information.

The committee requested the 41 tapes on Feb. 25, and last week set April 9 as the deadline for an answer. Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., threatened to subpoena the documents unless the White House replied.

Rodino said Monday a subpoena may be required and called a meeting of the committee for later this week before Congress adjourns for Easter to possibly ask for authority to issue a subpoena "in light of Mr. St. Clair's reply."

In related developments:

• Seven Republican members of the Judiciary Committee — led by Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill. — took the House floor to denounce the Democratic leadership and committee staff for delays in the impeachment inquiry. They said public acceptance of the committee's work depends on thorough and speedy completion.

• Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield promised that if the House did impeach Nixon and he was tried in the Senate, there would be "no circus... nothing in the way of hanky panky" among Senate members because, "the Senate itself will be on trial."

• The White House refused to say whether the Internal Revenue Service charged a negligence penalty against President Nixon in assessing him for back taxes, saying "there must be some element of privacy." There also was no word on how much time the IRS would allow Nixon to take in paying the back taxes.

Wilson: no part in 'British Watergate'

• Some newspapers are calling it the "British Watergate," and just a month into his new term as prime minister, Britain's Harold Wilson has found himself caught up in the controversy. At issue is a $2.4 million land deal in which members of Wilson's personal staff, including his personal secretary, made huge profits. Wilson has flatly denied any involvement, has refused to make any staff changes, and has pointed out that there is no evidence of anything illegal in the transactions. But it's a sticky situation for him nevertheless, because in the recent general election, he and his Labor Party made a point of condemning profits made from land speculation.

• Watergate aside — "I'll let others deal with that" — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Monday that unless the United States heeds the lessons of history it will be in trouble so deep "it will never be able to get out." Goldwater decried the "welfare state approach" in handling problems — throwing millions of dollars at the problems in the hope they'll go away — and called for a drastic cut in the "waste and inefficiencies and duplications" in federal spending.

Harold Wilson

John Wayne

• In a startlingly candid interview published in the West German newspaper Bildzeitung, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said he and his family are "very frightened" about the possibility of assassination if he were elected president. But, he said, he couldn't function if he worried too much about it. He dismissed reports that he was considering divorcing his wife Joan and said he would make a final decision about whether he would run for the presidency "in late 1975."

• Actor John Wayne gave a typically

John Wayne reaction to a charge by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., that White House influence had protected friends of President Nixon — like Wayne and evangelist Billy Graham — from tax audits. Dismissing Weicker as "that s.o.b.," Wayne said he was sending him a telegram saying, "For your information, I have never asked for, nor have I received, IRS favors, nor have I needed them. What I need is protection from cheap politicians like you. The IRS has reviewed my taxes annually and I deeply resent your using any senatorial privilege in throwing my name around." • Saying it would take half a year to reply individually to all his well-wishers, even if he did nothing else, banished Soviet novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn released an open letter Monday giving thanks for the "friendly warmth" shown him since his exile began Feb. 13. Solzhenitsyn, now living in Zurich with his family, said he had received an avalanche of mail from all over the West, and said it might represent the "future living unity of people" — five political prisoners in Soviet labor camps reportedly have renounced their citizenship and demanded to be expelled when their terms end. A letter smuggled out to the West also said many labor camp prisoners would go on a hunger strike when President Nixon visits Moscow in June.

• World champion Bobby Fischer seems as good at making demands as he is at playing chess: It was announced Monday that he would take part in the 21st Chess Olympiad on the French Riviera June 6-30 — providing he gets to play his games in a building separate from all other competitors. Tournament officials are studying the demand.

Miss Illinois Teen Ager hunt begins

Applications are being accepted for competition in the 10th annual Miss Illinois Teen Ager Pageant on June 28 and 29 at the Conrad Hilton in Chicago.

Last year's winner, Elaine Caras of Des Plaines, will crown the new winner. Elaine won the title after competing with more than 162 contestants in the 1973 pageant.

Illinois girls between ages of 13 and 17 are eligible to compete.

The state winner will receive a scholarship and a six-day expense-paid trip to Atlanta, Ga., to compete in the national finals where cash scholarships totaling $10,000 will be awarded.

The theme of the national pageant is "What's Right About America." Each contestant is required to write a 100-word or less essay on the theme.

Only one girl from the Northwest suburbs is a contestant for the state title. She is Maria L. Benson, 15, Palatine. Application blanks may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the National Teen Ager Pageant, P.O. Box 408, Rockton, Ill. 61072.

Politics

Township ambulance bill introduced

State Sen. David J. Regner has introduced legislation in the General Assembly that he says would prevent a repetition of the Elk Grove Village incident in which Mrs. Jean Pettee died while ambulance service was delayed because the Pettee family had no contract for service from the village fire department.

Regner's bill would permit townships to contract with counties or municipalities to provide ambulance service in unincorporated areas not served by fire protection districts, and to levy a tax to pay for the service.

State Sen. David J. Regner

Rep. Philip Crane

Also in the hopper...

Regner also introduced legislation to:

- Place investigations of race track operations under the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement, to remove such investigations from any influence by the tracks.

- Establish a limit on the amount of non-referendum bonded indebtedness that local governments may incur.

- To provide that investigations of mining accidents be placed under the Department of Mines and Minerals, removing the jurisdiction of the counties in which they occur, which Regner said are mostly ill-equipped to perform them.

RTA alternative asked

Legislation that would give "counties and portions of counties" to disconnect from the recently approved Regional Transportation Authority has been introduced by Rep. Thomas J. Hanahan, D-McHenry. Among the bill's cosponsors are Rep. John E. Friedland, R-South Elgin.

Hanahan's bill would allow disconnection by ordinance by the county board of supervisors, with approval of the residents of the area, presumably through referendum.

Following disconnection, the affected area would pay through taxes only that portion of RTA taxes spent for facilities of direct benefit to the area, before the disconnection.

Streamline Assembly?

Supporters of a movement to reorganize the Illinois General Assembly will seek signatures on petitions at suburban commuter train stations on three days next week.

They are seeking a referendum in November on a proposal to eliminate cumulative voting, establish single-member legislative districts, and reduce the size of the Illinois House of Representatives from 177 to 118 members.

The committee must collect 375,000 signatures by May 3. They will seek signatures in Palatine, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Park Ridge and Des Plaines on April 15, 16, and 17.

Crane urges repeal

Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, urged doctors around the country Sunday in Atlanta, Ga. to help repeal the so-called "cookbook medicine" federal law.

"Why not attack this law as the bad legislation it is?" Crane asked about 400 doctors at a rally sponsored by the Medical Assn. of Georgia to fight the law.

The law sets up medical professional standards review organizations to review medical decisions by state and other groups involving the treatment of Medicare, Medicaid and other patients in federal programs. (The Illinois Medical Society last weekend voted to assess its members $25 each for a campaign fund of $250,000 to fight for repeal of the law.)

2 incumbents, 2 newcomers seek Dist. 21 board posts

Jeremiah Crise: Expand science curriculum

Expanding the number and kinds of science offerings in Dist. 21 schools is one of the goals Arlington Heights incumbent Jeremiah Crise has in seeking a third three-year term on the school board.

Crise, 611 W. Hintz Rd., believes his six years of experience on the board makes him qualified for the position and he said he has a desire to continue to serve the community.

Crise said he also wants to continue his work with the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC). One of the founders of the cooperative, Crise is currently chairman of the building committee for the Samuel A. Kirk Center in Palatine.

BESIDES INCREASING science courses offered in the district, particularly in the areas of chemistry and physics, Crise said he favors exposing children to as many occupations as possible. He feels the addition of vocational education at the district's three junior high schools will aid in this effort and that it is good the classes will be coeducational. He would also like to see the Elementary Vocational Education (Project EVE) program continued.

Jeremiah Crise: Incumbent

Crise said he hopes some legal means will be established in the near future to obtain cash or land donations from developers to help offset the tax impact of their projects on local schools. The school district currently negotiates informally with developers except in Buffalo Grove where the village two years ago enacted a resolution requiring the donations.

"There should be some legal way of getting donations," Crise said. "I'm a stickler for ethics."

Crise feels citizen committees or advisory groups should be initiated by residents themselves when parents feel changes in school operations are needed.

He also favors appointing advisory groups to provide input to the school board on particular projects.

"Citizen groups should be formed when there is a specific job to do," he said. "I think we've done that in the past and that's what has made the district successful. Citizens of the district are our main source of information."

CRISE FEELS there is a good, working relationship between the school board and Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill.

"An organization is only as good as its

administrators or management," he said. "We've kept well-informed by the administration but we're certainly not a rubber stamp for the superintendent or anyone else."

Because of the building slowdown in the district, Crise does not feel the school board will be in a position soon of having to cut the budget. However, if money became tight, he said he would trim the amount of money spent on programs last.

On the subject of teacher negotiations, Crise said he thinks it is better to conduct closed sessions because "too many opinions are formed when contract information is made public in bits and pieces."

A former president and secretary of the Dist. 21 school board, Crise 43, is employed as superintendent of the fidelity and surety department of St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. He has two children in local schools.

Carol Karzen: More input is needed from community

Evaluate. Recommend. Implement. These are the three things that Carol Karzen feels every school board member should do before voting on a certain item.

Mrs. Karzen is seeking one of the two three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board against incumbents Jeremiah Crise and Jack Lane, and newcomer Alberts Vigants.

The Buffalo Grove resident feels she is qualified to sit on the school board because — she has children in school; is a clinical psychologist, has a Bachelor of Science degree in Liberal Arts from Northwestern University and a Master of Science degree from Loyola University and she is an artist.

The candidate also sees three main issues in this election. They are:

- Community involvement.
- Financial priorities.
- Development of human potential.

MRS. KARZEN SAID that the community should have more input into the district. She said residents should have an opportunity to evaluate what is going on in the district and make input in the way of recommendations back to the board. The board would then be able to implement the recommendations if they see fit.

She said she does not see this input to the board and feels that this may be a reason for the lack of people attending board meetings. As of her interview, Mrs. Karzen had attended only one school board meeting but said she has reviewed the minutes of such meetings for the last year.

She feels the same citizen input should be made on financial priorities. At the coffees and teas that she has attended during the campaign, Mrs. Karzen told those in attendance two things: "These are my priorities — What are yours?"

She also said less importance should be placed on non-educational spending and more on items that would benefit the students of the district.

Carol Karzen: caucus backed

Mrs. Karzen cited the board's approval of spending $7,500 for a landscaping master plan. She said this money should have been directed to the district's learning center rather than landscaping.

HER MAIN ISSUE, however, is the development of human potential, to see each child develop along the broadest possible approach. She would like to see some of the programs currently in Lake County Dist. 96 implemented in Dist. 21. That district operates under the Individually Guided Education.

The only caucus-endorsed candidate in the election, Mrs. Karzen refused comment on whether the Dist. 21 board is controlled by Supt. Kenneth Gill as some caucus members have charged. "I don't want to see in print 'Carol Karzen says Dist. 21 board is a rubber stamp board,'" she said in explaining her refusal to comment.

Mrs. Karzen also originally had no comment about the Dist. 21 Caucus, but later said it's better than anything the district currently has to evaluate candidates and until someone can come up with a better idea, she sees it as a good community organization.

The caucus became an issue in the Dist. 21 election when it endorsed Mrs. Karzen as the only qualified candidate and turned down incumbents Crise and Lane. Vigants did not appear before the caucus.

Jack Lane: Growth over, time for new educational ideas

Jack Lane believes the next five to 10 years will be "the most exciting Dist. 21 has ever seen." The Arlington Heights incumbent school board member is running for a second three-year term because he wants to be in on the action.

Lane feels that because the enrollment in the district is stabilizing and no new schools will be needed for awhile, the school board will be able to concentrate on implementing new educational programs.

"The opportunity of developing educational programs is fantastic if the money holds out," Lane said recently in a Herald interview. Consumer education on the junior high school level is one of the programs Lane would like to see added to the curriculum.

LANE ALSO FEELS the slowdown in school construction will allow the district to upgrade the teacher pay scale and provide more in-service training.

"Salaries in Dist. 21 are not as high as in some surrounding districts," he said. "We could give them a substantial raise this year, but salaries will go up in the other districts, too, so they may still be behind. This is probably one reason why we don't have too many men teachers. But I think it's a workable area and we're going to progress."

Lane said he would like to see teacher contract negotiations conducted publicly. The sessions were open two years ago, but closed last year and this year.

Lane has been criticized for his poor attendance at school board meetings in the past. He has missed the majority of meetings in the past year.

HOWEVER, Lane said his work schedule has recently been revised and he feels he will be able to attend all meetings in the future and devote the necessary time to school board business. He is presently sales manager and a salesman for G. E. Mack.

Jack Lane: incumbent

"Had the change in my job not occurred, I wouldn't be running," he said. Lane added that if his workload should increase again to the point that it interferes with serving on the school board, he will resign.

Commenting on the relationship between the school board and Supt. Kenneth Gill, Lane said, "I don't think any member on the board would hesitate to question Gill or any member of the staff. This is not a rubber stamp board. Maybe people think it is and that impression probably comes from our dependence on the administration."

LANE'S GOALS in the next three years include implementing the new vocational education programs at the district's three junior high schools and adopting better methods of evaluating student study habits. He also would like to see more in-service workshops for teachers to help them "make children better-equipped to live in this changing society."

In addition, he would like to see more community involvement and input to the school board from local PTA and PTO groups.

Lane is the father of four children who presently attend Dist. 21 schools.

Arlington Park officials hope for big racing year

by KURT BAUER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomer told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomer told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.6 million between 1968 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomer reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinsey, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kaval King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was boosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Alberts Vigants: His concern — early childhood education

"Everybody should have an opportunity to be on the school board. I'm just a plain citizen and that's what I'm running on," said Alberts Vigants of Buffalo Grove.

Vigants is seeking one of two available three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board in the April 13 election.

As the father of three pre-schoolers, Vigants is concerned about early childhood education and would like to see pre-kindergarten classes adopted as part of the Dist. 21 curriculum. He suggested seeking state and federal funds to help underwrite the cost of such classes.

Vigants is also interested in promoting a freer flow of information from the school board to the community.

Citizens' groups could be valuable to the school board, Vigants said, and should be used as much as possible to provide input from district residents on school matters.

Vigants suggested establishing a committee of parents and teachers, for example, to review textbooks under consideration before books are adopted for use in the district. Local PTA, PTO and PTC groups, he said, could provide people to aid in similar projects also.

Commenting on the practice of requiring housing developers to contribute land or cash to help offset the impact of their projects on local schools, Vigants said he doesn't feel it is fair to single out builders.

"I don't see the reasoning behind it," he said. "I don't know why builders should be assessed if you're not going to ask for money from all the other business people, too."

Vigants said he feels referendums are a more just way of providing new schools that become necessary as the student population of the district increases.

Vigants feels schools should provide children with as many and as varied experiences as possible. He believes a well-rounded curriculum is essential and would like to see more music and art classes in Dist. 21.

A resident of the village since 1969, Vigants is employed as an electronic manufacturing engineer with Simpson Electric Co. in Elgin.

Vigants received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Minnesota and the Milwaukee School of Engineering in 1959. He, his wife, Ausma, and their children, live at 780 MacArthur Dr.

Obituaries

Noble J. Puffer

Noble J. Puffer, 72, of Palatine, a long-time Illinois educator and former superintendent of Cook County schools, died suddenly late Saturday evening in his home.

Visitation is today from 3 to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Ahlgrim and Sons Funeral Home, 201 N. Northwest Hwy., Palatine, where funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. tomorrow. Officiating will be the Rev. Milo Vondracek of Naperville. Burial will be in Mount Emblem Cemetery, Elmhurst.

He is survived by his widow, Lillian, nee Olson; two sons, John and daughter-in-law, Dale of Palatine and Richard J. and daughter-in-law, Alison Puffer of East Moline, Ill., and six grandchildren.

Born in Cameron, Ill., May 5, 1901, Dr. Puffer graduated from Illinois Wesleyan University in 1923, and became athletic director of Hartsburg Illinois High School. In 1924, he became assistant principal of Arlington High School in Arlington Heights and in 1926, he became assistant county superintendent.

Dr. Puffer held the post of Cook County schools superintendent twice, from 1935 to 1947 and from 1951 through 1966, holding his position longer than any other occupant.

In the interim between his two periods of county service he served under Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson as chief of the Department of Registration and Education. He also served as educational superintendent for the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago, from 1966, until his retirement in December, 1973.

Dr. Puffer, who was known as an expert in school law and organization, was president of the Illinois Teachers College Board from 1949 to 1951. He was also a member of the National Illinois Education Assn.; the Chicago Assn. of Commerce; the Executive Club; Lounsbury Masonic Lodge, No. 751, A.F. & A.M.; Scottish Rite Valley of Chicago, Medinah Temple and a former ambassador of Medinah Temple.

Family requests, in lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Hadley School for the Blind or Chicago Christian Industrial League.

Edmond S. Hoey

Visitation for Edmond S. Hoey, 81, of Des Plaines, is today from 3 to 9:30 p.m. in Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, Des Plaines.

Mr. Hoey, who was retired owner of Hoey Toys in Des Plaines, died Sunday morning in Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. He was born Jan. 28, 1893, in Pennsylvania.

A Masonic service for Mr. Hoey will be held at 8 p.m. tonight in the funeral home, under the auspices of the Des Plaines Masonic Lodge, No. 890, A.F. & A.M. of which he was a member.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. tomorrow in the chapel of the funeral home. Officiating will be the Rev. Carl G. Mettling of First United Methodist Church, Des Plaines. Burial will be in Memorial Park Cemetery, Evanston.

Surviving are his widow, Venus L., nee Mathews; a daughter, Mrs. Pauline L. (Lloyd) Wisegood of Des Plaines; a son, William T. and daughter-in-law, Elaine Walters of Scottsdale, Ariz., and six grandchildren.

Family requests, contributions may be made to the Shady Oaks Camp for Cerebral Palsy Children, Parker Road, Lockport, Ill.

Carl E. Alm

Carl E. Alm, 64, of Prospect Heights for the last 16 years died Saturday in Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines.

A retired distributor for a news agency, and a member of a Moose Lodge in Chicago, he was born Nov. 30, 1909, in Chicago.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. today in Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, Des Plaines. Officiating will be the Rev. David J. Quill of St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect. Burial will be in Irving Park Cemetery, Chicago.

Surviving are his widow, Marvel, nee Knutson; a daughter, Mrs. Marilyn (Roland) Bauer of Des Plaines, and a son, Charles Alm of Prospect Heights.

Contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Paul J. Shisler

Funeral Mass for Paul J. Shisler, 13, of Des Plaines, will be said at 10 a.m. today in St. Stephen Catholic Church, 1267 Everett St., Des Plaines. Burial will be in All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Paul, who was a student at St. Stephen Catholic School in Des Plaines, died Sunday morning in Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, after an extended illness. He was born in Chicago, Feb. 14, 1961.

He is survived by his parents, Charles and Henrietta A., nee Precourt, Shisler; a brother, James R. of Wheeling, and two sisters, Sister Mary Paul, O.S.F. of Dyer, Ind., and Patricia Lynn Shisler of Des Plaines.

Family requests, in lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Cancer Fund.

Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, Des Plaines, is in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Arthur Ullrich

Arthur Ullrich, 82, of Barrington, was pronounced dead on arrival Sunday at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. Born in Chicago, Jan. 11, 1892, he was a retired self-employed commercial artist.

Visitation is tomorrow in Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, Des Plaines, from 11 a.m. until time of funeral service at 1 p.m. Burial will be in Irving Park Cemetery, Chicago.

Preceded in death by his wife, Minnie, survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Ruth Saville of Barrington, Mrs. Virginia Hix of Rockville, Md. and Mrs. Margaret Griffin of Richton Park, Ill.; seven grandchildren; two great-grandchildren, and two brothers, Eugene of Des Plaines and Earl Ullrich of Roseburg, Ore.

Family requests, in lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Lions Blind Fund.

Nellie Mrotek

Funeral Mass for Mrs. Nellie Mrotek, 86, of Des Plaines, was said yesterday morning in St. Stephen Catholic Church, Des Plaines. Burial was in St. Adalbert Cemetery, Niles.

Mrs. Mrotek, who was preceded in death by her husband, Stanley, died Saturday in the Golf Mill Nursing Home, Niles. She was born in Chicago, April 3, 1888.

Surviving are two sons, George and daughter-in-law, Armella Mrotek of New Jersey and Harry Mrotek of Des Plaines; six grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Lillian Spychala of Chicago. She was also preceded in death by a daughter, Mrs. Sophia (Doll) White.

Funeral arrangements were handled by Scheika Funeral Home, Chicago.

Floor hockey district tourney to be May 4-5

The Northwest Special Recreation Assn. will host the District 9 floor hockey tournament for the International Special Olympic floor hockey program.

The program is cosponsored by the Harry E. Foster Foundation and the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation.

A team from each of the 16 districts will be chosen to represent each of the National Hockey League teams. The team from District 9 will be sponsored by the Chicago Black Hawks, according to Clarence S. Campbell, National Hockey League president.

The competition will be May 4 and 5 at Lions Park, Mount Prospect. Winners from each district will travel to Canada for the finals.

The program will be for special education classification EMH and TMH youngsters from age 14 through 16. Younger or older children may participate, but will not be eligible to represent the district in Canada.

The Northwest Special Recreation Assn. will organize teams during Easter vacation. For more information call the association at 394-4948, or attend the first practice session at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez, on Saturday, April 13, from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m.

Two from area elected to county school board

Thirty-one votes were all Donald Brennan of Elk Grove Village needed March 19 to win a post on the Cook County Board of School Trustees.

Brennan, a write-in candidate for one of two four-year terms on the board, and Sharrie Hildebrandt, of 309 E. Lynnwood Ave., Arlington Heights, were the two local residents elected to the board. Vote counting for the board was completed by the Cook County clerk's office Friday.

Mrs. Hildebrandt, who was first on the ballot for one of two six-year terms on the board, polled 52,434 votes. Also elected to a six-year term was Michael Rothmann of Lincolnwood, who received 33,166 votes, the second highest of the seven candidates for the six-year terms.

Brennan, a manufacturer's representative who lives at 97 Shelley Ct., Elk Grove Village, had mounted a write-in campaign for a four-year term. Patricia Siebert of Evanston was the only candidate on the ballot for two four-year terms. She received 66,649 votes.

The Cook County Board of School Trustees is a seven-member, unpaid board which rules on boundary changes and annexations proposed by school boards in the county. Two years ago, no elections were held for the board because no candidates filed petitions.

Also elected March 19 was Arthur W. Luers of LaGrange, who was unopposed for a two-year term on the board. He received 64,978 votes.

Remember, that's 'Ron' Howard—as in 'Opie'

The Hollywood scene

by Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD — Ronny Howard, the star of the new "Happy Days" series, is the same young man who played little Opie for eight years on the old "Andy Griffith Show."

Howard has shortened his name to Ron. At age 22 he thinks it has more dignity, even though he plays a 17-year-old high school kid in the new ABC-TV series.

In real life Ron is a part-time student at USC, majoring in theater arts. He graduated from public high school two years ago with a 3.5 grade point average out of a possible 4.0. He also lettered in varsity basketball.

RON LIVES at home with his family in Burbank, along with younger brother Clint who plays one of the young buckeros in "The Cowboys."

Ron's room is a sloppy, comfortable chamber which looks more like a laboratory than sleeping quarters. It is crowded with cameras and film equipment. There is an editing table in one corner with reels and splicing material. Clothes are tossed hither and yon, along with scripts and textbooks.

He drives a Volkswagen to work and school, usually dressed in tennis sneakers, flares and a T-shirt. Because he wore a crewcut as a basketball player he is accustomed to the short haircut he must wear for the show.

Ron has breakfast at home, then reports to Paramount Studios at 7:15 for work. Production generally runs on until 7 o'clock in the evening, after which he stops for a bite to eat before returning home. He's addicted to cheeseburgers, french fries and malts.

SOME DAY SOON Ron plans to find an apartment equidistant from his parents' home, Paramount and USC. But there is a possibility he will locate near UCLA, 15 miles on the other side of town.

The reason for this is a pretty young co-ed who is majoring in psychology. She and Ron have been dating for the better part of two years. She isn't interested in acting.

Ron has been a working actor since he was six years old. He's accustomed to seeing reruns of "The Andy Griffith Show" and isn't fazed by seeing himself as a child.

"Once in a while I get critical of myself in those shows," he says. "Then I realize it isn't right to criticize an 8-year-old kid actor."

HE IS STILL a sports buff and spends much of his free time on weekends coaching basketball and baseball in the Burbank Park Recreation League for youngsters from toddlers to age 14.

"I've never regretted being a working child," he says. "It has allowed me to pay for my own education even though my parents can afford it."

Dates for dinner and movies with his girlfriend are limited to weekends due to the demands of the series.

This semester Ron has dropped out of USC classes to give full time to the show. But this summer he will enroll once more as a sophomore, determined to earn a degree in cinema toward the day when he will become a director.

'Look at that shot by Lott'

Doubles play steals show in 60-and-over tournament

by ED WORKMAN

It was the era of "The Great Gatsby" all over again. Long, white flannel pants, white cable-knit sweaters and clean white tennis sneakers. It was Sunday afternoon tennis, reminiscent of days gone by.

But something looked a little out of place Sunday at River Trails Tennis Center. That old guy hits that ball a little too hard for a sociable player. That overhead is too smashing, the volley too crisp, the serve scorching into first one corner, then the other.

Who is that George Lott guy anyway?

As the gallery of tennis fans watched in awe, few were aware at first that they were watching in action the man generally acknowledged as the finest doubles player of all time.

Lott, teamed with Clare Riessen of Evanston, father of world tennis star Marty Riessen, won another championship — this time the Chicago District Tennis Assn. annual 60 and over tourney, by defeating defending champions Dak Lathrop of Park Ridge and nationally ranked Nate Ganger of Ottawa, Ohio, 7-6, 6-3.

Jones of Glencoe beat Ganger, 6-3, 6-1 for the singles crown.

But the match of the day was the doubles finals.

Tennis fan elbowed tennis fan, exclaiming, "Look at that shot by Lott."

After a few of the "Who is that Lott?" the tennis buffs turned to the USLTA Tennis Yearbook. There was abundant information about this old pro, now with a little more stomach and a little less hair.

The greatest tennis player Chicago has ever produced, now DePaul University tennis coach, was playing in his first tournament in five years, but it wasn't as though he hadn't ever played in one. The Tennis Yearbook revealed that.

But most of the others weren't played at River Trails. They were played at such places as Forest Hills, Wimbledon and Paris.

And in the late 1920s and early 1930s, the players he met weren't named Lathrop, Ganger or Riessen. They were named Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines, Henri Cochet, Fred Perry, Don Budge.

They were the best tennis players in the world and many fans swore that the best of the lot — was Lott.

Statistics fail to reveal all of a man's greatness. Some of Lott's records have been broken, but as Babe Ruth is immortal to baseball, thus Lott is to tennis. And his records are as illustrious.

Winning the Davis Cup and winning at Forest Hills and Wimbledon are great feats, right? Well, Lott won the national doubles "just" five times. He won the Wimbledon doubles twice, Wimbledon mixed doubles once, U.S. indoor doubles twice, U.S. mixed doubles three times, the French doubles once, U.S. junior singles twice and U.S. junior doubles twice and the U.S. clay court doubles once.

Lott played both singles and doubles in 22 Davis Cup matches from 1928 through 1934. In 22 matches, he lost just four singles matches — and never lost a doubles match.

Sometimes he made it look a little too easy, in the process discouraging some of the finest players of the era. In 1928, he met China's top tennis star, Paul Kong. The Davis Cup preliminary match lasted a matter of minutes, and there were exactly 18 games played. The scoreboard read: Winner, Lott, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0.

The 1920s are long gone, and the 1930s are little more than a dusty memory for today's older tennis fans and ancient history for the supporters of the tennis boom of today.

But some things haven't changed much, and the game itself is one, of them.

Ten-year-old Danny Weiss of Schaumburg, a finalist in the national public parks tourney this year, watched Lott in amazement and remarked, "Boy, I wish I could play like that guy." Millions of people all over the world have been wishing the same thing for a half-century.

Second in a series.

by MIKE KLEIN

A Missouri gentleman and humorist name of Mark Twain penned earthy homespun fiction about little boys wearing tattered jeans and straw hats who kept one hand deep in trouble and the other on their cane fishing poles.

Twin's Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn and all the others were seven-day weekly funsters and, in that sense, very much like Gary Morava.

"He was a troublemaker from the word go," Fran Morava said about her son. "All the kids were. Not what you'd call a bad kid, but he got into a lot of messes."

"Gary was an instigator. He'd run around with a lot of big guys and they were his protectors. He'd always start everything first so they could finish it."

There was the day, for instance, when Gary and playmates wanted to imitate Tarzan. So they tied Richie Lynch to a tree, pulled the branches back and let fly. Richie broke both arms.

Gary was always a smallish youngster who had to be near the action. He rode bicycles at three years old, ran with the Prospect Heights neighborhood dogs and shot arrows at fish in the Des Plaines River. Whether these fish were already dead and floating belly-up isn't certain.

Not far around the corner was Gary's first contact with organized sports. And like most suburban youngsters who grew up hearing about Ernie Banks and Luis Aparicio, Gary's thoughts turned to Little League baseball.

With the guts and determination he exhibited years later in world-level gymnastics, Gary became the best shortstop anybody could remember around Prospect Heights baseball.

Right at the start, Gary was a winner. The town's 1963 Little Leaguers placed second in state behind Naperville and hadn't lost a game until the Illinois championships. Alongside Morava on that club was another kid who'd attain sports success. He's Greg Luzinski, the Philadelphia Phillies' bull-like slugger.

SECOND IN STATE. When Hersey High School's gymnasts placed second in the 1970 state finals, Gary Morava stood atop the awards platform, directly over his head coach, Don Von Ebers. Morava was the all-around state champion. At the microphone is Harry Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the Illinois High School Association. David Fry of the IHSA holds the runner-up trophy.

Gary didn't confine his abundant energies to baseball. There was time for football and basketball. Swimming lessons, and diving in particular, had been undertaken since he was six years old.

But like his father, Gil Morava, Gary was destined to remain small. In fact, he never grew bigger than 5-foot-6 and 130 pounds. And as a youngster, there wasn't much strength in those willowy, little arms.

When he reached MacArthur Junior High, Morava dropped the Big Three of little boy sports — football, basketball and baseball — only because his size would always keep him non-competitive.

"He went into wrestling but that didn't suit him," said Fran Morava. "It just turned him off to make a guy's nose bleed or smell his armpits."

There was a brief re-filing at diving but that wasn't quite suitable either. So Morava turned to gymnastics which offered more pieces of equipment, more skills to master.

Even during junior high, Gary was victim to the Excel Syndrome and did so, twice winning YMCA championships. He trained four nights weekly and three hours per session in the Northwest YMCA in Des Plaines.

Often, Gary practiced with younger sister Nancy, now 20 years old, who later joined her brother in gymnastics at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. Nancy competed for Herb Vogel's female squad. Youngest sister Jayne, a sophomore at Hersey, also works in the sport and has excellent potential.

But despite the YMCA titles, there wasn't any reason to predict Gary could become one of America's elite gymnasts. Except within Gary... "He just dug in and decided, 'I gotta do something great,'" his mom remembered.

Allowing for his half-pint size, Gary possessed excellent coordination and was a quick learner. During high school, Morava trained three or more hours daily. He expanded that to six hours at Southern Illinois. It wasn't unusual for Morava to train eight hours per day before international meets.

The drive and desire never surprised his parents, even when Gary was a youngster. "He wasn't any different from any other kid," said Gil Morava. "If he liked something, he did it. If he didn't, he kind of sloughed off. But if he really enjoyed something, he wanted to excel."

Gary spent two high school years at Wheeling. It was then Wildcat coach Wayne Selvig, now athletic director at Buffalo Grove, who convinced Morava to expand past tumbling and trampolining to all six gymnastics events.

And the ever popular Morava had another small triumph, winning the Mr. Ugly contest as a freshman.

But after his sophomore year, Wheeling, Arlington and Prospect high schools were split to form the first student body of Hersey. And that's when Morava came in contact with Don Von Ebers.

In his free spirit fashion, Morava was late to classes "time after time because he was constantly being stopped in the hall and talked with," said Von Ebers. "He was known and loved by an awful lot of kids. You couldn't get mad at him. He always had a smile."

But in practice, Morava was all work. Without him, Hersey could not have finished second behind Hinsdale Central in 1970 state championships. Morava won all-around honors. He was Von Ebers' only state titlist in 23 coaching years until Bruce Freedman tied Rolling Meadows' Blaine Dahl for side horse honors in the 1974 finals.

But Gary's greatest moments were still ahead. His SIU years under coach Bill Meade included six All-American awards and the 1972 NCAA vaulting title. That same season, Morava was second nationally in all-around, fourth on high bar, tied for fourth in floor exercise and sixth on parallel bars.

It was his greatest NCAA. One year later, when Morava was bothered by many injuries, he placed third in all-around and floor exercise plus sixth on parallel bars.

Morava never represented the United States in Olympic, World or Pan-American games. Coming off shoulder surgery last August, he was a clinch World and Pan-American member this year.

But he had other great moments. Nineteen thousand persons watched Morava and American teammates work against the Chinese National Team last year in Madison Square Garden. He made 1971 trips to Rumania and France, then visited Bulgaria last June and Russia two months later.

Morava competed in Chicago Stadium when Olga Korbut, the 1972 Olympic favorite from Russia, made her celebrated appearance in a meet between the super powers. He also worked meets against the Hungarians and Swiss. And he was 1973 United States Gymnastics Federation vaulting champion.

His last public appearance was against the Polish National Team on Feb. 17, 11 days before his death. Morava was great just six months after major shoulder surgery. The people who watched him couldn't have known a great career was over.

Three area teams post wins in tennis action

Tennis Editor

Fremd, St. Viator and Buffalo Grove were the tennis winners in dual meet action Friday.

The Vikings blanked Ridgewood 5-0, the Lions handled Elk Grove 6-3 and the Bison surprised Glenbard North 3-2.

Rich Central beat Rolling Meadows 6-3.

FREMD SHOWS STRENGTH

Coach Rick Gablenz sent a letterman-loaded lineup against visiting Ridgewood, winning all but one match in straight sets.

Rich Courtney, playing first singles, was the only Viking who had to struggle. He dropped the first set, 3-6, before winning 6-1, 6-0. Courtney is a senior letterman.

The rest of the wins came like this: Senior letterman Chris Laffey took second singles 6-0, 6-0; senior letterman Mike Lincoln took third singles 6-0, 6-0; senior letterman Mitch West and Dan Sealey took first doubles 6-3, 6-3; and juniors Steve Adashek and Chris Harris took second doubles 6-0, 6-2.

The frosh-soph team also won 5-0.

ST. VIATOR IMPRESSES

Both St. Viator and Elk Grove were playing without their No. 1 men — Tom Wenzel for the Lions and Ken Pollitz for the Grenadiers. The results would probably have been the same as the Lions of Coach Steve Antrim handled their hosts pretty easily.

Singles went like this: Jeff Davenport over Bruce Kinn 6-4, 6-2; Bill Siebold over Pat Fleming 7-5, 6-2; Steve Carroll over Greg Kelley 2-6, 6-3; 7-5; Paul Orloff over Bob Soderholm 6-2, 7-6; Don Grasse over Ken Vasquez 6-4, 6-4; and Greg Casciaro over Duane Sitkiewitz 6-0, 6-4.

Jim Bernardini and Don Barnak beat Kinn and Bill Hatzold in first doubles 10-8. Soderholm and Mark Staddler over Fred Schnitzius and Mark Mayle 10-0 and Neal Nishihira and Steve Wellman over Paul Orloff and Tony Stallone 10-8.

Elk Grove won the sophomore meet 6-3.

BISON NOTCH 1ST

"The kids really felt good about it," said Don Bieri, Buffalo Grove's head tennis coach. Winning the first tennis meet in the school's young history will usually cause such a reaction.

Entertaining the former Mid-Suburban League school — Glenbard North, the Bison won two singles and one doubles match for the 3-2 victory. Posting the wins were these Bison:

Bill Christensen handled first singles 7-5, 6-3; Howie Hollander took second singles 6-4, 6-2, and the first doubles team of Tim Kane and Mike Ellis won 7-5, 6-1.

Coming up on the short end but still enjoying the team victory were George Bestable (7-6, 3-6) and the doubles team of Mike Ursin and Dave Shla (1-6, 2-6).

The frosh-soph team made the day complete with a 4-1 win.

West sets up careful contract

North put down the dummy and remarked, "I wish I could take back my four-heart bid."

South replied, "I feel the same way about my five-heart bid, but we should make it anyway."

He took the diamond lead and promptly played his ace and king of trumps. East discarded a spade and the silence for the new few minutes could almost be cut by a knife.

Then South led a spade. West was in with the ace and it was his turn to think. Finally he led a second diamond which dummy ruffed.

The next play was the king of spades from dummy. This gave West an excellent chance to let South make his contract. All he had to do would be to ruff that spade, but West had thought things out carefully. He discarded a club.

Dummy's jack of spades was led next. West ruffed this time and led a third diamond to force dummy to ruff with its last trump.

Dummy was down to five clubs. South had to lead ace, king and another and there was no way to keep West from scoring the setting trick with his 10 of trumps.

Follicles determine the amount of hair

Please settle a disagreement between my friend and me. I say that if a person shaves or removes hair with a depilatory then the hair doesn't grow back in a greater amount or darker in color. I think that it only looks darker because it hasn't been bleached by the sun yet and that is why it looks darker.

The number of hairs depends entirely on the number of active hair follicles within the skin. The follicle is like the root to a blade of grass. You can cut the top off and the root will allow more grass, or hair, to grow right back.

The stub of hair is tougher, and a shaved area will give that bristle-feel to touch. If you ever walked over some cut grass stubble or stubble from a wheat field you can see how tough it is too at the base. The shaving doesn't make the hair tougher, it just leaves the tougher stubble.

Cutting off or even pulling out the hair still leaves an active follicle, and the hair will return just as it was, no darker and in no greater quantity. The only way to solve the problem is to remove the follicle. This is what electrolysis does. Using an electrical needle the hair follicle is destroyed.

It usually takes several treatments to get all the hair follicles because some of them have not sprouted their next hair at the time of one procedure and can't be located. By repeated procedures, in time all the hair follicles can be destroyed, and hence no more hair.

sively worse. I know there is research going on. Is there anything at all that can relieve this terrible tired feeling? I do have so much work that needs to be done. So, constant rest is out of the question. I go around feeling so tired that at times I'm like a zombie.

You may well have thalassemia, but I doubt you have Cooley's Mediterranean anemia. That particular type of anemia is usually confined to young children. Most likely you have another variant of the thalassemia type of anemias.

The thalassemias are all abnormalities in the formation of hemoglobin which is associated with varying degrees of anemia. Depending on the severity of the problem, the liver and spleen may be enlarged, and there may even be jaundice. Since you don't mention these things, I would assume you do not have that severe a form.

Probably your fatigue is related to an anemia. Your doctor would most certainly know with a simple blood test. He may be able to control your anemia with medicines. I do want to assure you that what you have is not leukemia, nor is it cancer. It is an inherited condition affecting the hemoglobin or iron-containing pigment within the red blood cells.

KILLING THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGG (Part III)

HOW 45 MILLION AMERICAN CAR OWNERS LOST A TIDY 34 BILLION DOLLARS IN 90 SENSELESS DAYS (November, December, 1973 & January, 1974)

OR

HOW WORLD WIDE MANIPULATION OF CRUDE OIL PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION OUGHT TO ENTITLE EVERY AMERICAN WHO OWNS A VEHICLE OVER 4,000 LBS. TO A $750.00 TAX CREDIT ON HIS 1974 INCOME.

DON'T HOLD YOUR BREATH WAITING FOR THAT TAX CREDIT.

Here is what I predict will happen in the next three years (1974-1976) as American car manufacturers switch from "big" to "small" cars (3,500 lbs. is the dividing line) . . . and the predictions aren't rosy.

- There will be LITTLE to NO reduction in overall gas mileage because people will continue option purchases on smaller cars. Wait and see, I'll bet I'm right.
- In the end people will find that 100% small vehicles is not the answer to America's vast stretches of miles, let alone the ups and downs of hills and mountains. THE "BIG" CARS WILL COME BACK.
- There will be a loss in resale value, which in large part has already occurred, of $750.00 to one-half of America's present 90,000,000 cars - or $750.00 times 45,000,000 cars - totaling $33,750,000,000. Five out of every seven American car owners will have to take that loss when they trade off their "big" car. They can thank poor planning in government bureaucracies around the globe for that. You can bet you won't get a tax break either.
- Layoffs will occur, both directly and indirectly, in the auto industry affecting several hundred thousand workers, both "blue" and "white" collar, raising unemployment from the 4.5% figure of November, 1973 to 7-9% by late 1974 - and THAT'S NOT FUNNY. This blunder, the result of a righteous group of anti-big car do-gooders, should not be allowed to occur but . . . sadly . . . it will . . . it has already begun.
- Profits of the auto/truck industry will plummet, affecting their future capital investments, taxes paid by them to all political subdivisions and LOWER to NO dividends to millions of stockholders.
- There will be a continual eroding of confidence in American business, in free-enterprise, in the dollar on an international level.
- A recession has already begun. The government's reaction will be to pump "new" money into the system, thus aiding an already serious inflation.
- The ominous specter of a world-wide depression is nurtured.
- Auto dealers will go broke - just as 1972-1973 brought some kind of stability into retail vehicle marketing for the first time since 1950. Estimates run 5% to 25% of dealers will not make it through the years 1974-1976. Such a failure rate will make for a chaotic vehicle consumer market place as millions of promises, responsibilities and obligations will not be met by out-of-business dealers.

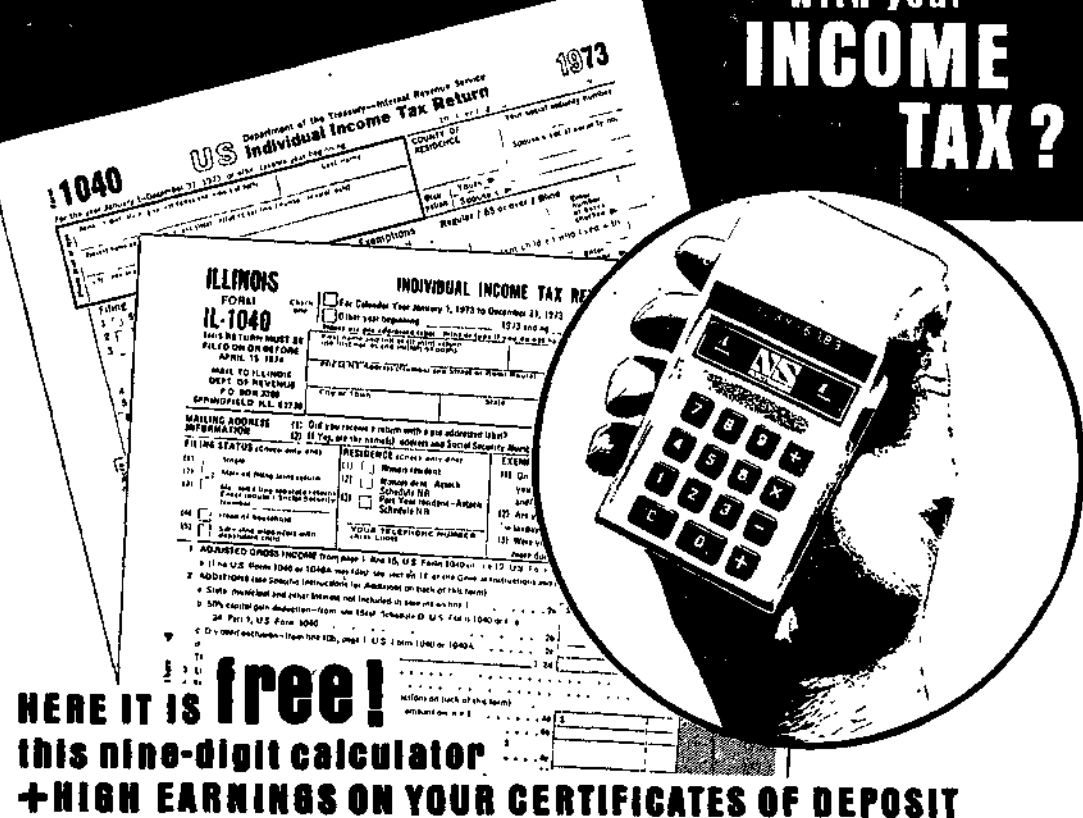

While the auto/truck industry has many faults of an ecological nature, it is still the goose that laid the golden egg. It is the vibrant heart of industry here in America and worldwide. WHAT PEOPLE DO NOT NEED IS RADICAL CHANGE. What we do need is market-place evolution towards safer, more efficient non-polluting vehicles. If the golden goose be killed upon what base shall we provide an economic society where life has dignity? Many remember the Great Depression. It's not funny when one of three people cannot find a job. Those who would kill the auto industry have come up with nothing in the way of alternative jobs for those out-of-work . . . but then . . . what could be expected of critics . . . they only know how to criticize. . . not plan and build.

Crossroads issue revived

Nursing home supported

I am impelled to speak out after reading the report March 27 on the public hearing for a proposed nursing home in Rolling Meadows. The city council seems to have spent the majority of their time making sure no services would be available for teenagers instead of investigating the planned services for older people.

The continued opposition to a nursing home in our area seems to stem not from economic or zoning objections but from a superstitious fear of having contact with anyone over 60. Surely there are families in town who would be pleased to have their elderly relatives getting good care in a modern facility and at the same time close enough to visit and see often. The answer? "If Mom (or Grandma) was right in town she would be so demanding!" Demanding of what? The same amount of love and attention that she gave to her grandchildren or children when they were young and helpless without her?

The older people and especially the infirm are treated like freaks of nature, misshapen and horrifying monsters, contaminating to children and an awful reminder of what may someday happen to us all.

The pillorying of Dr. Finlayson because he was running the Crossroads Clinic I find inexcusable. There may be parents who tell their children honestly all the facts about sex and who are willing to accept, however reluctantly, their children's decisions about their own bodies. Such parents may provide their children with birth control information and venereal disease checkups. Such parents are very, very rare. It's time the city governments realized that the state law protecting the privacy of the doctor-patient relationship includes privacy from moral judgments by people not directly concerned, be they parents or not. Birth control information is not a privilege of marriage. Venereal disease

letters to the editor

Is not a punishment for premarital sex. And a doctor who provides, within the framework of state law, counseling and help to youths who are already having a sexual relationship is not a perverter, an inductor to promiscuity or a destroyer of the family.

New 'unwanted' plan

I have read, with great interest, the letters on abortion. Since, we all want sex without responsibility, here are some solutions to attain our goal:

- Why murder unwanted children? We should murder the unwanted parents; they are producing unwanted children. Murder the fathers or the mothers, go to the source of the problem.

- Four million fetuses have died in vain. They may have solved our food shortage problem. I quote, Swift's pamphlet "A Modest Proposal":

"I have been assured by a very knowing American of my acquaintance in London, that a young healthy child well nursed is at a year old a most delicious, nourishing, and wholesome food, whether stewed, roasted, baked, or broiled, and I make no doubt that it will equally serve in a fricassee or ragout."

To those who are in favor of abortion demand — too mad you were not aborted before you were born. Do you believe you were wanted?

Gregory S. Woz
Wheeling

Dr. Finlayson provided a needed service, attested to by the number of people who were seen at the clinic. He had the moral strength to resist attempts by possessive parents and religious dictators of morals, and was finally stopped by the unexpected nonrenewal of his lease. Now he is trying to start a new service, one irreproachable in respectability and is discovering that Crossroads Clinic will be an abattoir for even that.

I truly sympathize with protective parents who wish to cocoon their children safely away from the hard facts of life, and make their decisions and judgments for them, but wish they would remember that if their teens aren't telling them now for fear of a negative reaction, they won't tell them until something forces them to, and an unplanned pregnancy or permanent sterility from an undetected case of gonorrhea are much harder facts to live with for everyone.

The Rolling Meadows council members, by making a witch-hunt out of what should have been conducted as a business meeting, have shown once again that no legislator can make an objective decision when he has an emotional stake in the proceeding. By basing, or seeming to be swayed, by the reputation that Dr. Finlayson has as a troublemaker in the home, they have disgraced themselves and the constituency they represent.

Police, fire tax urged

Dear State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights:

Now that the Pettee controversy has died down, I think it is time to come up with a solution to the problem of unincorporated areas throughout the state. There has been a proposal in Elk Grove Village that persons living in the unincorporated areas be required to pay a large fee if fire or ambulance service is requested. It has been estimated that the cost would be $50 for ambulance assistance and $100 for each piece of fire equipment dispatched to the scene. This is an unrealistic solution to the problem for two important reasons.

First, if a fire should start in a house not covered by village protection, the owner's initial reaction would be to try to arrest the fire without the fire department's assistance. This is a normal reaction when one is faced with the possibility of a bill running into the hundreds of dollars. The outcome, however, could mean complete loss of property or life. The same is applicable in regard to ambulance service. If an accident or sickness should occur in an unincorporated area not covered by ambulance protection, a decision might be made to take the victim to the hospital in a car in order to avoid the bill for the ambulance service. Needless to say, this too could result in injury or death.

The second problem with the proposed solution is that a fire department is incapable of functioning properly when run on a "pay when you need us" basis. A fire or police department is only able to exist through steady yearly taxes. Trying to finance these departments on a pay later basis is just not feasible.

I propose that the state government enact a law requiring all residents of a town or village to be taxed for fire and police protection. Regardless of whether a person lives in an unincorporated area, as long as he is within village boundaries he should be taxed. This insures everyone of prompt, efficient service at times when these factors can be crucial in saving lives and property.

It is the opinion of the supreme Court that a state has the authority to pass a law in order to foster and protect the health, safety, morals and welfare of its citizens. The Pettee incident has brought to light the fact that sometimes people do not have the good sense to protect themselves, therefore, it is the duty of the State Government to make sure they are protected.

Sharon L. Rook
Elk Grove Village

She reviews obscenity law

I've seen Ms. Oliver's opinion (Wednesday, Feb. 27) in the Elk Grove Herald regarding the anti-obscenity ordinance here in Elk Grove. I am a free citizen of that village and have already phoned in my "feedback" to the "protectors," and hope that others have, or will, too. For what it's worth, here is my reasoning:

Number 1, I believe in God. (Right away I'm chalked off as a fanatic.) Number 2, I believe people are responsible for their actions; to themselves, to others, and to God. (Which may be denied by those who have perfected the skill of rationalizing all they do.) Number 3, I believe the anti-obscenity ordinance is a step in the right direction, not a means to dictate to the people. (Is it such a shock that village officials actually might be "acting in the best interest of the people" by formerly requesting the theater not show this X movie? What ulterior motives do they have now for this ordinance, do you think? Communist subversion?) Those who fight so hard against this type of ordinance obviously have become callous to the whole rotten impact exploited sex trash has had and is having on the values of our country, our own children and young adults, and their parents. Without courage of conviction, people are not strong in the face of corruption. If some are afraid of so-called faddish and impulsive censorship, let them see that type does not survive, but certain values do remain and it is these films, completely devoid of any value, against which the ordinance is aimed. And, yes, by the way, I wish the ordinance could also remove the "girlie" magazines you mentioned from the counters of our stores too.

Is Elk Grove going to be unique? What's wrong with crossing the border to find a place pleasantly "removed from the rest of the world"? Why can't it be Elk Grove or Arlington Heights or Des Plaines or any of our towns, for that matter? If this is what we residents think is good for our village, let's let the skeptics hear from us. The news reporters are polling those who are against the ordinance at the theaters. Is anyone polling those who are for it? You said, Ms. Oliver, "God save us from those out to protect us." From this kind of "protection" God save us, while we allow under our very noses the spread of a deep wrong which we could be instrumental in correcting? To me, a no-support attitude on the part of those who agree with the ordinance smacks more of apathy, the don't-get-involved syndrome, don't make waves, don't stand up for your own rights, don't make a commitment, than a concern for the movie viewer's freedom. Granted, there are some G-rated shows that are stupid and dull, but at least they aren't aiding the spread of distorted views, or the growth of vice and corruption. Let's face it. The sex act of all humans, made in the image and likeness of God, and all the activity and anatomy that goes along with it, was not created to be exposed and flaunted in theaters in such a cheapening, dehumanizing manner. Admit it. People go to X movies to get "kicks," and from a steady diet of it

Saturday vote backed

Mr. James Vance of Hanover Park wrote to the Fence Post complaining about School Dist. 54's referendum being held on a Saturday or not on a regular election day. This is just plain ordinary dumb. The reason that they are held on Saturdays is to give everybody a chance to vote because usually everybody works during the week.

I am not a township employee, only a resident of 13 years, and I vote in all the bond referendums. The reason why I vote is that it's a right that I have and I use that right. A lot of people don't vote because they really don't care which way the vote goes. So the next time you don't want a referendum passed, call your neighbors and talk to them about their voting rights. Maybe out of 50,000 people in our township you'll get 10 per cent, but don't hold your breath. And do you really think that they would vote your way if this referendum had been held any other day?

Some people are so darned apathetic they don't care what happens even if it does touch their wallet and some are patriotic enough to know what their rights are and vote in every election. So if you want to complain, do it to your apathetic neighbors, not the Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 who has enough problems without you sticking them with this one.

'Rock bottom' sales?

Times sure do change! For several years automobile agencies have deemed it necessary to use pretty, sexy-voiced, scantily-clad females in their advertising. But according to an ad in the March 29 Herald, in order to be the first with the latest, one agency portrays a male streaker, clad only in bobby socks, inviting one and all to "streak over to their place of business."

Will such an attraction sell more cars and will it decree that the scanty "cladding" of females has to go? One must wonder if the family member who used to buy detergents and floor waxes is now buying the family cars. You know what I mean. Seems to me that it is the advertising that has struck rock bottom, er —, what bottom was that, again?

'Polling place poorly marked'

I have a complaint about the polling place for Dist. 108, Wheeling Township. Both my husband and I were very anxious to vote on March 19. Then it dawned on us we were not sure where our polling place was, as it had changed the past two elections.

I had picked up the Herald on Monday and they listed districts and locations. This was the beginning of our problems. They listed the address of our polling place as 325 McHenry Road, Buffalo Grove. They also had a map that was impossible to read.

We started looking for our polling place at 9 a.m. and finally found it at 9:45 a.m. After traveling up and down McHenry Road in Buffalo Grove and then backtracking, assuming it to be a misprint, we still couldn't find the address. We continued on to the village hall seeking assistance.

There we were informed by a very nice lady that our polling place was the club-house in Whippetree, about a quarter of a mile from the main entrance. I remarked to this lady that there was no indication at the entrance, not even a flag to designate it was a polling place. She suggested I mention this problem to the workers there.

Upon entering the polls, we brought this matter to the workers' attention. One of the women there said, "Oh, something should be done, shouldn't it?" And that was the height of the conversation.

At noon there were still no markings at the entrance, not even a sign indicating the address. At 4:30 p.m. there was a small sign tacked to the Whippetree entrance sign. This turned out to be a poster for a candidate only.

We put forth the effort to vote, but when you have to go on a treasure hunt to find your own polling place, I feel this is a pretty sad state of affairs.

We wonder just how many people in Dist. 108, Wheeling Township, had our problem and did not vote due to not having the time to follow through on trying to find this location.

We surely hope something will be done to rectify this situation before the November elections.

'No baby-sitters'

I direct this note to Judy Macsmasas and concerned teachers of Thomas Junior High.

I do not send my child to school to be baby-sat by her teachers. She's sent to school to learn. I will say no more, because I'm sure there are a few dedicated teachers who feel they are not baby-sitters.

By the way, I kept my daughter home before it was announced that schools would be closed and we live only one short block from school.

'Land purchases would hike taxes'

The taxpayers of Mount Prospect should not be expected to assume the burden of the Rob Roy purchase. Mayor Teichert has quoted the figures of $30 a year for 20 years as the homeowners share. Thirty dollars a year represents approximately a 30 per cent increase in our local taxes.

The village officials are also contemplating the purchase of the bank building and the Central School site. If the village, the library board and the park district, or any combination of the above, are successful in purchasing these three parcels of real estate, the local taxes will then increase by 40 to 50 per cent over the 1973 taxes. This would be a $40 to $50 a year increase in local taxes alone. Of course the tentacles of all the other taxing bodies will be reaching into our pockets at the same time, for additional increases.

In my opinion, we cannot accept the proposition of the Rob Roy purchase. This is an extravagance which should immediately be exorcised from the minds of the village officials.

What, then, should have priority? The purchase of the bank building by the village, the Central School site by the library board, or the purchase of Rob Roy by the village or the park district?

If it is absolutely imperative that Rob Roy remain open space, have our village fathers considered offering this proposition to the forest preserve district? In Cook County the forest preserve district presently has approximately 63,000 acres of open space, with seven golf courses therein. If the forest preserve district could be convinced of the advisability of the Rob Roy purchase, and by the village board going that route, our taxes would probably go up about $1 a year, not $30.

If by some chance the residents of Mount Prospect are panicked into the Rob Roy purchase, let us hope it is not retained as a golf course, which is usually surrounded by an eight foot steel fence, topped with barbed wire, and which shuts out 80 to 90 per cent of the people from using the land.

Open spaces paid for by the people should be accessible to all the people every day of the year and not catered to a small segment of society for their exclusive use a few months of the year. We do not need and cannot afford another golf course. I would like to remind the village and the park district officials of Webster's definition of a "park."

"A tract of land set aside to be preserved as near its natural state as possible, or beautified by landscape-gardening, to which the public have access or enjoyment."

If, and I repeat if, more open space is needed in this area, Rob Roy should be converted into a park and not retained as a golf course.

Female college graduates command higher salaries

by ROZ LISTON

NEW YORK — You've come a long way, baby — so far, in fact, that women are beginning to command higher starting salaries than men in some fields.

The 35 million women in the U.S. labor force still earn 40 per cent less than male employees, but female graduates with specialized degrees have started to break the salary barrier.

Women holding degrees in engineering or business are the target of a feverish hunt by industry, under pressure from the Federal government to hire women for positions outside of the secretarial area. Competition among employers for this small group of women specialists often erupts into a salary war with women receiving better offers than men.

IN 1972-73, women bachelors in engineering were offered an average salary of $936 a month compared with $929 for men, according to a survey by the College Placement Council. Women engineering graduates received 94 per cent more job offers than in the 1971-72 period, the survey showed, while their male counterparts reported a jump of 83 per cent in bids.

"The very scarcity of women engineers, their motivation and talent, and government pressure on industry has made them a desirable commodity," says Mrs. Jean Kessler, director of the Bethlehem, Pa., council.

Women specialists in accounting, marketing and finance at New York University's undergraduate and graduate schools of business are receiving some offers conspicuously higher than the average salary for their fields. "Industry has been slow to discover that women perform exceptionally well, but in the last two years it has offered somewhat bigger starting pay to women business candidates than to men," says George C. Dines, associate director of NYU's Business Placement Center.

ONE WOMAN in accounting has been offered $17,800, although the average beginning salary in this field is $14,500. "At accounting firms the dollar-and-cents offers are running ahead for women," says Dines. A U.S. Department of Labor report on salary differentials between men and women business students in 1970 revealed the largest gap occurred in accounting. Only four years ago women accountants started at a median salary of $746 a month and men at $832.

"Industry generally is looking for quality rather than tokenism when it seeks women business candidates," says Ralph M. Zinc, director of NYU's Business Placement Center. "But even if an offer is obviously tokenism, I tell women students it's a wedge in the door and a chance to prove themselves." Zinc says some employers have indicated it would be "helpful" if the applicant were a woman.

"NYU MAY BE a little ahead of other universities in placing women at higher salaries because of urban exposure," Zinc observes. Northwestern University's Endicott Report on job prospects for the nation's 1974 college graduates said starting salaries will be almost identical for women $752 to $952 a month and men $741 to $963.

And the academic community, hard hit by suits charging discrimination against women professors in hiring and pay, has given way to bigger paychecks for women at two-year private colleges. Women teaching at these schools earned an average of $9,596 in 1972-73 compared with $9,462 for men, according to the U.S. Office of Education.

Gas outlook stable, motor club says

The outlook for gasoline availability and prices remains stable this week, according to the Chicago Motor Club. The club's recent fuel-gauge report indicates that no Chicago-area service stations are operating on a daily quota of gasoline sales, and only 2 per cent are imposing a dollar limit on sales.

Eighty-two per cent of the Chicago area stations surveyed reported a supply outlook for this week that's as good or better than last week. In downstate Illinois, 90 per cent of the stations surveyed reported the supply outlook as good or better than last week.

In Chicago and suburbs, the average price of regular gas is 56.2 cents a gallon compared to 55.5 the previous week. The average price for premium is 59.8 cents a gallon compared to 60.3 a week earlier. Wide fluctuations in price were reported. The price of regular ranged from 47.9 to 62.2 cents a gallon, and premium gasoline prices ranged from 51.3 to 66.2 cents a gallon.

Boost in cost of mail means added expenses

The two-cent boost in the cost of mailing an ordinary letter — up to 10 cents — means a sizable increase in postage expense for many companies.

Edwin C. Bruning, vice president and general manager of Addressograph Multigraph's Multigraphics Division in Mount Prospect, said cost-conscious executives should review their mailing policies to offset the postage increase.

Among Bruning's suggestions:
Avoid needless mailings. In town, use the phone — it's faster, and offers two-way communication.

Purge mailing lists. If there are names that are marginally unimportant, remove them. Obsolete names and addresses should be screened.

Combine mailings. Why send two letters when one will do? Consider reducing the size of copies, and consider using both sides of your paper. Try to be brief.

Review attachments and enclosures. Can they be lightened or eliminated?

Avoid mailing carbon copies. Mail one letter and indicate the desired routing, or have added copies photocopied at the receiver's end.

Strike against United Air Lines averted

A possible strike action against United Air Lines by members of the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace workers was averted Saturday morning. Mediators in Washington, D.C., worked out a tentative contract agreement between the airline and machinists shortly before the 6 a.m. strike deadline.

Warren Waterloo, financial secretary for Des Plaines-based Local 1487 of the machinists union, said members will vote on the contract proposal. The details have not been announced, he said Monday. Approximately 2,700 machinists worked for United. The airline is based in Elk Grove Township.

Pollution plan unfair

Cook County's proposed auto emission test program is unfair to suburban car owners.

The $3.5 million price tag is too high. The goal of reducing Loop pollution by 15 per cent is negligible in the battle against foul air. The enforcement plan — which would inspect cars, but not taxis, buses or trucks — is too selective.

The Cook County board should reject the proposal as incomplete and should demand federal funding of the program which was ordered by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The federal mandate is an unfortunate example of a moneyless order from Springfield or Washington to begin an undeveloped, do-gooder program that will increase the financial burden on local citizens.

County Board President George Dunne, who is seeking total federal funding of the program, should be firm in resisting implementation of the testing until federal financing is pledged.

County officials could face a possible court injunction for failing to meet a federal planning deadline of June 1. The risk of court wrath may be worth the time gained to develop a fair, comprehensive plan.

The federally-ordered goal is to reduce pollution in a 35 square mile area of the Loop by 5 per cent. Advanced anti-pollution devices on new cars will provide a 40.8 per cent carbon-monoxide level reduction. Chicago testing and parking limitations will eliminate another 7 per cent of pollution. The remaining 15 per cent will be charged to suburban drivers.

George W. Duane

Less than 35 per cent of suburban cars are driven to the Loop area. They contribute only 15 per cent of mileage driven in the pollution target area. Of the suburban cars, a maximum of 30 per cent could fail the proposed county test.

To reach the small percentage of suburbanites who drive polluting vehicles in the Loop, county officials proposed testing yearly of the 1.2 million cars in the Cook County area. If federal funds are not available to finance five testing centers, the county will be forced to either charge a $3 to $5 test fee or to add the $3.5 million cost to future tax bills. The cost and inconvenience of testing for drivers who never drive into the Loop are unacceptable. The potential for graft in inspection of cars and the possible expansion of county payroll patronage are endless.

The county board should begin examination of numerous other proposals for cutting Loop pollution. Possibilities include random testing of cars, inspection and certification of cars that drive in the Loop, retrofitting of taxicabs, programs to encourage use of mass transit and testing of trucks and buses.

The solution to Loop pollution seems to rest with Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, not with suburban tax money. The city has a car testing program. But efforts to ban on-street parking and to cut Loop traffic are a sham. The city and the county should examine plans for fringe parking and shuttle service that have worked in other metropolises.

Until a workable testing program is offered, the county board should resist pressures to bow to another Washington dream.

'Ye gods, the basement!'

Every once in awhile I get a bug to sell the house and move into an apartment, and since home ownership is right up there with motherhood as one of the major events of a lifetime, I weigh the advantages and disadvantages very carefully.

There is, for instance, the advantage of moving and not leaving a forwarding address so that nobody I don't want to see could find me — like magazine salesmen and perfect housekeeper dropper-inners who, having gotten their own houses in perfect shape, drop in on me when I'm reading but I should be dusting.

And maybe, in the process of packing the entire household, I'd find the cookie sheet and my favorite nightgown that got lost in transit the last time we moved, 19 years ago.

And there wouldn't be any lawn to mow.

On the other hand, I would have to leave my wonderful neighbors and my worthless cat and I would miss them very much. The neighbors and I are always helping each other in our vernacular emergencies and the cat keeps my feet warm on nights he doesn't have anything better to do.

Another stumbling block to moving is, ye gods the basement, where I would have to start the awful job of packing. We call it "ye gods, the basement" instead of just "the basement" because when anybody wants to know where's the charcoal or their golf clubs or the big Christmas wreath and I say, "in the basement," they say, "Ye gods."

The basement got that way partly because we built our own home and have a lot of leftovers which if it was food would make a dandy pot of soup or batch of hash. But it's not food, it's lumber, plumbing fixtures and saw horses and, ye gods, it creates the kind of basement that needs apologizing for even after it's been cleaned.

The basement is also that way because we're a familyful of savers. Any time one of us starts to throw something out, somebody else cries, "Wait! That looks familiar," or, "Stop! That looks like it belongs on something." If I moved I would discard all that stuff and, having moved, would immediately discover all the things that need the things that looked like they belonged on something.

Packing to move is bad enough, but then follows the just-as-bad job of unpacking. Nineteen years ago it took me two years to get everything unpacked and I didn't have a full-time job then. If I had to unpack now that I'm working I'd go to my grave wondering which carton my green stamps were in.

Getting all these arguments down on paper has been a very moving experience. Moving enough for this year.

Washington window

State race tests Nixon

by GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON — The stakes could rise sharply soon in a special election in Michigan's 8th congressional district.

The Republican candidate, James M. Sparling, has invited President Nixon to campaign in the district before the voters go to the polls April 16.

Nixon is said to be considering the invitation and the Washington Post said he finds himself against impeachment charges.

A GOP defeat would leave him more isolated.

There is reason to suspect the White House was less than enthusiastic about the way the invitation was presented. Sparling seemed to be putting some distance between himself and Nixon by saying it would give the President a chance to defend himself on Watergate and on his economic policies.

Moreover the invitation was made public, putting the President in something of a box. If Nixon rejected the invitation, it might leave the impression he was afraid to go into Michigan.

Ford already is committed to help Sparling, which means the April 16 election will be a test for him, too. But if the President campaigns, it may be difficult to establish who was responsible for what — good or bad.

Ford is still getting overwhelmingly favorable reaction to his Chicago speech riling into Nixon's 1972 re-election team as "arrogant."

Reports that the speech was a hurry-up job, written on the plane to Chicago, turned out to be incorrect. They were based on the fact that only a single copy was brought aboard the plane and a secretary typed copies for the traveling press.

Ford approved the final draft himself, however, and obviously considered it important. It was an apparent effort to put as much distance as possible between the Republican party and Watergate.

But the Vice President denied it was aimed at putting distance between Nixon and the GOP.

The fact is, however, that Ford has tentatively has decided to accept. If so, the stakes become greater for Nixon than the outcome of the election itself.

The 8th district has been Republican since the depression thirties. The GOP candidate is believed running behind, however. His Democratic opponent, State Sen. J. Robert Traxler, is hitting Watergate hard in the style of Richard Vander Veer, who won the Michigan seat vacated by Vice President Gerald R. Ford.

The President will be putting his dwindling prestige squarely on the line if he campaigns in Michigan.

A Republican victory would tend to close party ranks around Nixon as he de-cation, instead of forcing it down our throats, we might be more inclined to really learn something. As it is, our schools consist of a lot of "b.s." courses and not much real learning.

Again, I would like to quote Mr. Butler. He says that "failure is the outcome of not following directions or being under control." To me, this statement is an example of a dangerous attitude in our schools and in society in general.

If society says I am to constantly follow directions, then I'm not in much of a hurry to join society. This attitude of subjugation of the individual is ever present in our society. It seems a rather self-defeating attitude to think that this situation is not reversible, especially in schools where we are supposedly learning. Can't we also learn tolerance of the opinions and values of others, providing they do not physically interfere with our own?

Many adults would say that students are too young to decide what is right and what is wrong. After all, look at today's Teen-agers. He is disrespectful to his teachers and to his school, he takes drugs and is difficult to get into a classroom. Well, instead of assuming this behavior is irreversible, why not ask what is causing students to behave in this manner. Could it be that they are reacting in frustration to the prison-like atmosphere of school?

George Bernard Shaw said: "There is nothing on earth intended for innocent people so horrible as a school. To begin with, it is a prison. But it is in some respects more cruel than a prison. In a prison, for instance, you are not forced to read books written by the wardens and the governor. In prison they may torture your body, but they do not torture your brains."

I think it is time for our schools to stop "torturing" our brains and let us read our own books.

Fence post

have painted quite a picture of your chosen profession.

Later in the article, Mr. Butler is quoted as saying that it is his job to "coerce, persuade, force — do whatever I can to show positive growth on that permanent record card." To me, these statements appear rather negative. In fact, the dictionary would define "coerce, persuade, force" as using authority, law or power to compel. Why is it necessary to force anyone to do anything? Perhaps if our school system were to encourage (Webster's definition: to inspire with courage, spirit or hope) edu-child in class and he would make no more phone calls to gripe about a teacher.

What we pay our teachers and what we expect them to put up with is certainly out of proportion.

I can't help projecting these parents who excuse their child's every wrongdoing and blame other people, into the future. I suppose they'll be running to the office where their child works, making excuses why their child comes in late or not at all.

In judging what kind of parent you are, it's when your child is out of your sight that he's speaking for you.

'Near-tragedy prevented'

Like many other people I am guilty of perhaps taking for granted the dedicated and splendid services rendered by our fire and police men. It seems that all too often this is not realized until tragedy or near-tragedy strikes close to home. This happened recently when my husband, only 42 years old, was a victim of a heart attack. The paramedics were called and during that short interval between the call and their arrival, critical lifesaving methods were employed by the members of the Buffalo Grove police department, and with the arrival of the paramedics, the necessary medical intervention was intensified. Thanks to these people, my husband is on the road to recovery.

I'd like to thank Patrolman Floyd Merenkov especially for being alert to the crisis and acting upon it. My appreciation also to: Sgt. John Crimmins, officer Kerry Kenney, officer Charles Weidner, paramedic Bob Krause, paramedic Ron Erickson and paramedic John Kiebecka.

Tough discipline hit

After reading part two of Wanda Lynn Rice's and Katherine Boyce's "Discipline in our schools" series, I find myself compelled to reply, both as a student and as a human being.

What perturbed me the most, to write, were the opinions stated by Mr. Lee Butler of Conant High School. In my opinion, Mr. Butler's comments are representative of some of the basic problems with the American education system.

Our high schools treat students, not as individuals, but as "carbon copies" to be "manufactured" in assembly line fashion. For instance, Mr. Butler has made the comment: "They (students) have to have someone to make them do what is good for them." How is it, Mr. Butler, that you, in your wisdom, can tell individuals what is "good" for them and what is not? It seems to me that you have set yourself up in a rather oppressive position, handing down decisions on what is "right" and what is wrong.

As for comparing toilet training to a high school education, well, you seem to

'Kids should understand teachers'

This letter is in support of Kenneth Pancyk, the teacher who wrote that parents and not the schools should be disciplining their children.

Just as an experiment I walked through the halls of two of our junior high schools and the backtalk and verbal abuse from the children taken by the teachers would put so many parents to shame. As a result we see the problems on the buses and the detention problems in the high schools.

The teachers are doing a fine job of trying to understand the difficult age the kids are in. How about expecting our kids to understand one teacher a day?

I've even heard that the administration doesn't back a teacher but will side with a child making a complaint to his parents. I believe this practice gives a dangerous advantage to the child. After all, the parents were not in the classroom to witness the incident, but it seems every lay person is an expert on education.

The complaining parent should be required to spend one hour observing his

Clergyman has a vision for television

Can God compete with Police Story?

by KAREN BLECHA

The music director gave the signal to sound the trumpets. It was the moment the congregation had been waiting for.

The Rev. Owen Carr warned them something big would happen that Sunday morning early last fall. They believed him; there wasn't an empty seat in the house.

Rev. Carr had a vision. It had come to him in prayer, the answer on how to minister to the spiritual needs of a metropolis as large and varied as the Chicago area. One church couldn't do it alone. But a television station that would provide clean and moral entertainment as well as religion could. That was the answer.

There was only one hitch — Rev. Carr would need $4 million to start the station and get it on the air. His goal was the summer of 1974.

THE MEMBERS OF Stone Church in south suburban Palos Heights backed up their pastor. In 2 1/2 hours, they gave $235,000 in cold, hard cash and pledges during the next 12 months. Some never missed the money; others borrowed to donate.

That was last Sept. 30. Today Rev. Carr, having formed Christian Communications of Chicago Inc. to start the station, is only $65,000 closer to his goal than he was that morning at Stone Church. Small donations have been made by individuals and churches, several in the Northwest suburbs. But the big money, the money that could make the difference between a dream and reality, is not coming in. Rev. Carr admitted he's disappointed, but said he won't give up.

"It would take a miracle for us to get on the air by this summer," he said. "But the Lord doesn't always work on my timetable although it is often to my advantage he does not. A consciousness that the vision itself was born of God has sustained us and kept us from getting discouraged."

MANY PEOPLE WOULD laugh at Rev. Carr's idea, call him a dreamer or even a religious fanatic.

Maybe he is. But the 50-year-old pastor is not new to the ministry and has reason to believe he can accomplish what he set out to do. Since he came to Stone Church three years ago, attendance has doubled and the church is now one of the largest in southwest suburban Chicago. His congregation, affiliated with Assemblies of God, includes Roman Catholics as well as Protestants. Priests and nuns visit his services. Some of his congregation drive as long as 3 hours round trip every Sunday just to hear him preach. And they did support his television idea with $235,000.

That money is being used for advertising to raise the $4 million for Christian TV. Christian Communications directors appealed to foundations but were turned down because they have no track record to show. The only proof Christian TV can work is that it has succeeded in 10 other cities from Los Angeles to Boston, so why not Chicago?

No reason at all, Rev. Carr contends. Potentially, an audience of 8.1 million viewers exists in the Chicago area and Christian Communications figures they could get at least 30 per cent to watch Christian TV at least once a week. The station, which would begin programming from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. each day, would expand eventually to 24-hour programming. The frequency would reach an area from Milwaukee to Kankakee, and from Rockford to South Bend.

THE SAME WEEK Rev. Carr started his campaign to raise money, Channel 44 announced it would add some religious programming to its station. That's good, Rev. Carr said, but it's not enough. Channel 44's religious programs are not shown during prime time and the station still airs programs with violence, he said. And Rev. Carr opposes violence on television — it is one of the main thrusts of his campaign.

"By the time your child graduates from high school, he will have witnessed 18,000 violent deaths on television," Rev. Carr writes to parents when asking for money. "Such a statistic scares me."

Carr's station, which would be color UHF or VHF (cable TV has been ruled out), will not broadcast wall-to-wall preaching. Rev. Carr and his group are adamant about that. They want to reach all people in the Chicago area. Besides religious programs, they intend to include children's programs, educational television and non-violent entertainment for all age groups. Programs would also be geared to minority groups.

THE PASTOR admitted the most likely audience for his station will be churchgoers who want more religion, shut-ins who can't get out to church and parents who want more non-violent programs for their kids. But he won't stop at that. He believes non-churchgoers will also watch the station, even though they have obviously turned their back on established religion.

"We have many young people right here who have turned off the institutional church but are still interested in the Bible and Jesus Christ," Rev. Carr said. "There are many adults in that same category."

The station would not accept commercials, depending on people who buy time to air their own programs to pay for operating costs. The station would have a stringent moral code. "We have seen some religious programs that are a disgrace and we wouldn't allow that on television," Rev. Carr said.

REV. CARR SAID his station would consider programs from all religious denominations, including Jewish programs.

"I cannot see ignoring the Jewish community. It would be only Christian to include them. Besides, I have a warm spot in my heart for the Jewish people because Jesus was a Jew," Carr said. "I think Christian television could go a long way in tearing down barriers between religions and people."

Christian Communications will not reveal its exact plans for purchasing a station because the group believes its chances are better for getting approval from the Federal Communications Commission if they don't.

The $4 million is needed initially because the FCC requires a station have enough money to start and stay operating for one year. A $2 million figure would be acceptable, Rev. Carr said, but that would mean the station would not have its own studio to make its own programs. So Christian Communications is going for it all.

The group contends the station is a bargain compared to the cost of building churches. Four modern church facilities to reach a total of 4,000 people would cost $4 million. With the same money Christian television can reach 8.1 million potential viewers, and that's less than 50 cents per person per year.

ONCE CHRISTIAN Television is safely on the air, Rev. Carr will return to giving his full attention to problems of his own church. But for now, after his Sunday sermons, Christian TV has priority. He said his congregation understands.

"We want to address ourselves to the problems of the city and Christian Television would be a powerful voice for doing that," he said. "Out here in one church you can yell your head off about problems like drug abuse and even if you have the right solution, no one will hear you."

Another doggie tale

Big John lost this fight

by MARIANNE SCOTT

Beauties, beasts and babies top the list of attention getters, and of the three it's been our experience that the beasts have it — paws down.

The beasts at our house look like hugable stuffed toys. They're covered with curly white fur. Their be-ribboned ears are long and fluffy. And they have dancing dark eyes.

Without even trying our little poodles are always the center of attention. Muffin once found herself the star attraction of a woman's pro golf tourney as spectators and players alike found her more appealing than the dog leg to the right.

Two of them on a fashion runway can easily steal the show from the professional mannequins, and three of them traveling together are more than enough to upstage even John Wayne.

Big John, in an outfit that included 10-gallon hat and cowboy boots, was busily signing autographs at O'Hare when the master and I, accompanied by Muffin, Jellybean and Lollipop, arrived at the ticket counter.

USUALLY JB preferred to wear his suede coat with the guns and holsters, and the girl dogs preferred their pastel rabbit coats, but for this trip they asked to wear their matching mother-brother-sister endangered species coats. (I never told them the leopard coats were fake.)

Within seconds a small crowd began to gather, oohing and aahing over the little trio of jungle animals. Big John still had the lion's share of admirers.

Then came the weighing-in. Eighteen pounds of dogs and 30 pounds of shipping cages. Well, after all, their pillows, blankets and toys were in those cages, too — all of which were duly noted by the crowd.

Our side was now gaining. The Duke's was waning. And by the time we got out the vet's anti-air sickness pills, our side was way ahead.

"I PROMISE not to get sick!" pleaded Lolli, who sometimes couldn't even make it to the vet's in the car.

"Those pills make me thirsty!" whined JB.

And from Muffin, "I won't, I won't, I won't!"

Such behaviour was indeed very embarrassing to the master and me, but very entertaining for the crowd which by this time had formed a dense circle around us.

JB and Lolli just sniveled as I popped the pills down their throats. But that dogged Muffin only pretended to swallow her pill — and then coughed it up. And would you believe? The crowd cheered and clapped!

I looked up, and there, practically in the front row, towered Big John.

He grinned. "When you can't beat 'em, join 'em," he drawled. Still chuckling, he turned and strolled off — into the fluorescent sunset of the concourse.

Annual meet for gardeners

The annual meeting of the Garden Club of Illinois will be held Monday and Tuesday, April 22 and 23, at the Sheraton-Oak Brook, Oak Brook, Ill. The committee includes Mrs. Eugene J. Tamillo of Des Plaines, president of the club, and Mrs. Peter Plauter, also of Des Plaines.

Annual reports, a luncheon with John Strohm, editor of National Wildlife Magazine as a speaker, a program on the "Do's and Don'ts of Home Landscaping" and an awards banquet are on the first day's agenda.

Tuesday's schedule includes a judges breakfast, the annual meeting, a program on "TLC for Plants," luncheon with installation of officers and a talk on "Preservation Technique."

All members of the 277 Illinois affiliated garden clubs are invited. Mrs. Bruno Ramthun, 2411 Brenderwood Road, Rockford, Ill., 61107, is taking reservations and checks. Monday luncheon is $5.10; Monday banquet, $9; Tuesday luncheon, $5.70. Registration is $3 for package plan, or $1.50 for single meals.

Las Vegas Night

Prospect Heights Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club will hold a Las Vegas Night Saturday, April 27, in the Mount Prospect VFW Hall. The public is invited and tickets, at $4, are available from Mrs. Peter Downing, 729-8392.

Proceeds will benefit the Samuel Kirk Center in Palatine and the Berkeley School in Arlington Heights. An auction will conclude the evening.

Garden movie open to public

A movie which records all phases of gardening from January to January will be shown at 8 Thursday evening in the Hoffman Estates Community Center.

Presented by the garden interest group of Hoffman Estates Woman's Club, the program is open to the public for a donation of 50 cents.

The movie will be shown by its producer, Robert W. Elich of Park Ridge who has combined his hobbies of photography, gardening and travel. Detailed close-ups of beginning seedlings under lights, transplanting, making cuttings, forcing bulbs, greenhouse procedures and acaquatic gardening are included in the movie.

The speaker is a member of the Men's Garden Club of the North Shore and the Royal Horticultural Society. He is also an accredited horticultural judge of the Men's Garden Club of America.

Greasy drip dry napkins her problem

Dear Dorothy: Used drip dry green dinner napkins for the first time and they became covered with grease spots. Soaked them in detergents and in enzyme-active laundry products and then laundered. No luck. Might you have any suggestions? — Mrs. Frank Adams

Grease can play particular havoc with drip-dry and polyester. As soon as possible one should rub one of the good dish-detergents on the stains, let stand, then launder. If this doesn't help, try the three-step method of applying nonflammable dry-cleaning fluid, rubbing on detergent and then laundering. After using dry-cleaning fluid, laundering and a thorough rinsing before machine drying are important. If none of this works, you can try the recommendation of a chlorine bleach manufacturer:

First, test the bleach effect on the napkin by mixing one tablespoon of bleach with one-quarter cup of water and applying one drop on a seam with an eyedropper. Let stand one minute, then blot dry with a paper towel. If there is no color change, go on with the bleach treatment. Mix one-half cup of bleach in a gallon of sudsy water in a glass, plastic or enamel container. Soak the stained item for five minutes. Rinse well. This can be repeated if necessary. Then follow with regular laundering. Luck!

Dear Dorothy: I'm one who delights in your tips. Here's mine: To make smooth, tasty brown gravy, put one-half cup or so of flour in a small pan alongside the roast in the oven. Use this browned flour, mixed with cold water, to thicken the juices. — Mrs. Leo Slavin

Dear Dorothy: With all the talk of vitamins and minerals, it seems a good time

by Dorothy Ritz

to remind the younger homemakers that stirring air into orange juice will cause the disappearance of vitamin C if the juice is left to stand awaiting consumption. — Dorothy Laben

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

EGG BASKETS adorned with gingham ribbons will enhance the Easter Sunday dinner tables at the Plum Grove Nursing Home in Palatine. Marthe Nelson, Kay Chisamore and Margaret Schumann, members of Country-side chapter of Alpha Delta Pi, put finishing touches on original centerpieces, a benefit project.

Next on the agenda

BUFFALO GROVE GARDENERS

Buffalo Grove Garden Club will mark its sixth anniversary as a member of the Garden Club of Illinois and a member of the National Council of State Garden Clubs tonight in Old Orchard Country Club, Mount Prospect. The evening will begin with cocktails at 7, followed by 7:30 dinner.

Mrs. Jack Kubinek will be installed as president; Mrs. Thaddeus J. Godlewski, first vice president. Serving a second term as second vice president will be Mrs. James Long. Second terms will also be served by Mrs. Allen Hable, treasurer, and Mrs. Gerald E. Richter and Mrs. Kenneth Kay, secretaries.

Mrs. Vincent Mastrandrea, Mrs. Joseph Miller, Mrs. Alfred Mey, Mrs. Barbara Fee, Mrs. Robert Sotwedel, Mrs. O. A. Schilling, Mrs. William Egan and Mrs. Donald Tracey will be named committee chairmen.

MEDICAL ASSISTANTS

Northwest Cook County Chapter, Medical Assistants, will meet Wednesday in the auditorium at Northwest Community Hospital. Subject will be "Yoga Rx," guest speaker being Shirley Walter, (Yogi Raja).

Doris Miller, 255-5415, may be contacted for further information.

OUR SAVIOUR WOMEN

There has been a change in starting time for Wednesday's meeting of the United Methodist Women of Our Saviour United Methodist Church, 611 E. Golf Road, Hoffman Estates.

The program begins at 8 p.m. instead of 8:30 as originally scheduled. Schaumburg Festival Theatre group will give a dramatic reading of "The Terrible Meek."

BETA SIGMA PHI

The home of Mrs. Jim Mauch in Palatine will be the meeting place of Xi Zeta Epsilon Chapter Wednesday at 8 p.m. Mrs. A. V. Kaelin will co-hostess.

Two programs have been scheduled, "Gardening" by Mrs. Richard Schenck and "Landscaping the Home" by guest speaker Clyde Castle, architect with A and J Landscaping firm in Palatine.

ALPHA OMICRON PI

Philanthropy will be the main concern of Northwest Suburban AOPs when they meet at 8 Wednesday evening in the Mount Prospect home of Mrs. W. Mottweiler, 504 S. Owen. Members will be bringing layette items, toys, toiletries and adult recreation games for Cook County Hospital. They will also be making tray favors for the hospital and soliciting philanthropic funds to the hospital, the Arthritis Foundation and Illinois Children's Hospital School.

At the meeting Mrs. Donald Keenan,

Park Ridge, will be installed as president; Mrs. Leon Henson, Des Plaines, vice president; Mrs. Jack Clark Jr., Arlington Heights, treasurer; and Mrs. David Conway, Arlington Heights, and Mrs. T. Richards, Park Ridge, secretaries.

There will also be a memorial ceremony for Mrs. Charles Kallevang who died suddenly last September, and plans will be discussed for the council lunch April 22 at the Holiday Inn in Oakbrook Terrace. Mrs. Daniel Pellettieri Jr., 359-7358, Chicago Council vice president, is taking reservations.

Countess Pulaski

MOUNT PROSPECT BPW

Mount Prospect Business and Professional Women's Club will hold its annual VIP night Thursday at Arlington Park Towers Hotel. This is the program of the year when members invite employers, husbands and friends.

Guest speaker will be Countess Maria Pulaski who served as an espionage agent during World War II and will tell highlights of her adventures.

May flea market space for rent

Deadline is Friday, April 26, for area crafters and antiquers wishing to rent booths in the antique flea market and crafts show sponsored by Arlington Heights Chapter 992, Order of the Eastern Star.

The flea market will be held May 18 and 19 in the Arlington Heights Masonic Temple, 1104 S. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights.

Spaces approximately 8 feet by 8 feet are $12, and 8 by 11 are $14 for both days. Interested parties may call 253-6977 for additional information. Checks may be made payable to Arlington Heights Chapter 992, OES and mailed to Dorothy Whitesel, 304 N. Emerson St., Mount Prospect, Ill., 60056.

Happy housewives are invited, too

Area housewives, whether searching, frustrated, discontented or happy, are invited to a class on "Fascinating Womanhood" to be held Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in the Elk Grove offices of Mrs. Phil Dowd.

Based on Helen Andelin's book, "Fascinating Womanhood," the class points out that the greatest contribution a woman can make to the well-being of society is in the home in building a happy marriage and family life.

The course is sponsored by the Andelin Foundation for Education in Family Living, an organization established to promote the happiness and welfare of women everywhere.

Interested women may call Mrs. Dowd at 956-0738.

Why not Singapore?

Far East trip isn't complete without stop here by MURRAY J. BROWN

SINGAPORE — Why not include a stopover in storied Singapore if you are planning a tour of the Far East?

It's a bustling modern metropolis with gleaming white skyscrapers, some of the world's most luxurious hotels, and duty-free shopping rivaling Hong Kong.

Surprisingly, too, it has probably the cleanest streets of any major city in the East or West, thanks to strictly enforced anti-litter laws, and you can drink the water too.

What surprised me were the changes in the skyline as the result of a building boom since my last visit about four years ago. The new skyscrapers include more than 100 new luxury and first-class hotels.

INTER-CONTINENTAL, Hilton, Sheraton, Hyatt and Western International already are here as are Japanese and other international hotel chains. Some are posh resort-types with swimming pools, saunas and health clubs, shopping arcades and other amenities — one even has a 16-lane bowling alley.

Our party checked in at the new Mandarin Hotel. It is 40 stories high and has 700 rooms, a revolving rooftop restaurant, seven other dining rooms and night clubs and five cocktail lounges and bars, including one for men only.

A duty-free port since it was founded in 1819 by Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles on the site of a Malay fishing village, Singapore rivals Hong Kong as a bargain hunter's paradise.

Shops offer the finest merchandise from around the world — British wools, silks from China, Thailand and India, Swiss-made watches, Japanese cameras and radios, batik from Malaysia, Balinese carvings, jade, silver, precious stones and jewelry, among others.

SINGAPORE NIGHTLIFE — As soon as the sun goes down, Singapore's colorful nightlife begins.

Most hotels have nightclubs with international floor shows featuring artists from all parts of the world.

PRICES ARE fixed in such major departments as Robinson's. But bargaining is the name of the game in small shops in Change Alley, Chinatown and elsewhere.

Wise shoppers check prices in several shops before getting down to the real business of buying. Never pay the original asking price, they advise.

If you hold out long enough, you could knock off from 10 to 50 per cent!

Even if you don't intend to buy anything take time to visit Change Alley, a narrow lane lined with open shops selling just about everything, where most of the tradespeople are Indians. The alley near the waterfront is named after the authorized Indian money changers who at times will offer you a higher rate of exchange for your dollars than the banks.

Chinatown is about a mile from downtown Singapore and also should be included in any tour, if only for the sights, sounds and smells of the district where many Chinese still follow the old ways of life.

Here is Sago Lane with its Death Houses where ailing elderly Chinese come to spare relatives from the anguish of watching them die, ordering their coffins and making other preparations.

THIS CAPITAL city of the 224-square-mile island republic of Singapore off the tip of the Malay peninsula is one of the world's busiest commercial, financial and communication centers. It boasts the fourth largest port after Amsterdam, New York and Hong Kong.

About 76 per cent of its 2.1 million population are ethnic Chinese — the remainder include Malays, Indians and Eurasians. Malay, Chinese and Tamil are official languages but nearly everyone speaks English.

Americans need only a valid passport and international certificate of vaccination against smallpox, and of cholera if coming from an infected area.

Learning 'lingo' may save some cash

These days it seems that every business has its own special vocabulary of strange words that nobody else can understand. The travel industry is no exception. When you decide to go on a vacation, you hear travel people tearing off words like "carriers" and "packages" and "GIT" and "MAP" and it all sounds like gobbledygook.

Actually, these cryptic words and acronyms do have a meaning — in many cases they can mean considerable savings for the traveler.

A good example is a new summer vacation plan designed by the Jamaica Tourist Board in cooperation with several airlines and nine different hotels on the central north coast of Jamaica. However, in doing so, they've managed to introduce still another word that's not only unintelligible but seemingly pronounceable: "Boonoonoonos."

TO BEGIN WITH, "package" means that you buy everything at once including your plane ride on a "carrier." In this case, you are getting air fare and accommodations at the hotel of your choice at one set price.

"GIT" is an acronym for "Group Inclusive Tour," a shorthand way of saying that you pay less than usual for your package because you are going along with a group of people doing the same thing.

As for "Boo-noo-noo-noos," it's a Jamaican colloquialism meaning "enjoyable, smooth or lovely," which is what the Jamaicans hope your summer vacation is going to be. Their "Boonoonoonos Holiday Package" which goes into action April 16 and lasts until Dec. 15 covers seven nights and eight days and includes all kinds of enjoyable, smooth and lovely extras.

There are transfers (transportation) from the airport to your hotel where you are proffered a welcome rum punch and a complimentary bottle of Tia Maria Jamaican liqueur. There is a ride in a glass-bottom boat over clear Caribbean waters to view beautiful reefs, and a torchlit feast under the palm trees after a boat ride up the White River.

Those electing to vacation on "MAP" (meaning Modified American Plan, or breakfast and dinner included) may dine at other hotels at no extra cost. And you may "split the week" at two or more of these nine hotels. There is even a discount book for shopping and golf privileges at the 18-hole championship Runaway Bay or Upton courses.

Whether you ever learn to pronounce "Boonoonoonos" or not, all you have to do is go to a travel agent and tell him what you want to pay within the range of package costs. You can choose your airline among Air Jamaica, Eastern and Pan American.

GAMBLE AT LAS VEGAS, NOT BOOKING YOUR TOUR

Today's business world dictates a business growing on its reputation must "tell it as it is" . . . Las Vegas is the "hottest" travel destination available today and is probably the most-misunderstood . . . mainly because of the great diversity of plans, package tours, charters, group tours, individual plans, plus a dozen or more offshoot plans. Check any travel section or radio commercials and become one of the not-exclusive confused public. It seems like our travel consultants spend half of their time explaining the pros and cons of this maze of Las Vegas plans.

Ads specify round trip air via group departures $163.00 and in small print, PLUS $22.00 tax and service charge, PLUS cost of hotel package plan selected, PLUS weekend surcharge!! Add them up, it's usually no bargain!!

A package plan is nothing more than when a tour operator combines a low air fare with hotel package and "Presto" you have a package to Vegas.

You can do this yourself by selecting when YOU wish to leave and return on the airline and equipment of your choice, the hotel desired (the new M.G.M. Hotel, The Hilton, the Desert Inn, or any of the "strip" hotels. Every hotel offers a package plan including two nights lodging plus various "goodies" (shows - cocktails - free gambling, etc.) depending on the hotel. These plans range from $24.95 to $51.50 per person, based on double occupancy. By purchasing any of these plans, you qualify for the special individual tour-based airfare of $185.00 per person round trip, plus security surcharge of $1.27.

We have built our agency an individual travels, leaving the groups for the "cattle mowers" . . . keep your individuality . . . go-and-do-when-what-you-want, not when the mob moves . . . Who wants to wait for the other 98 group members???

Assert yourself, travel "like a captain" in charge yourself!!!

Lilies in bloom

Bermuda beckons—especially in April

by CLARE WRIGHT

Any time of the year is a good time to visit Bermuda, where it's nearly always balmy and beautiful — and where sunshine is an abundant quality.

Give me my choice, however, and I'll pick April when the fields of Easter lilies are in bloom.

Still the most important export of this mid-Atlantic resort colony, the lily also provides local perfume makers with their most popular fragrance.

Opening a bottle of one of the island's perfumes can release nostalgic memories of romantic walks down flower-fringed Bermuda lanes.

EVERYWHERE on the island you'll find flowers so brilliant and beautiful we have sometimes found it hard to believe they are real. Springtime is the time to see them at their best.

But actually the air is always sweet with flowers in Bermuda. In June, the perfume is oleander. In August, it's frangipani or jasmine.

It seems like everything grows in Bermuda, from morning glories to night-blooming cereus. There's poinciana, whistling pine, allspice, calabash, fiddlewood, cordia and palmetto.

In fact, morning glories and nasturtiums are so abundant that Bermudians consider them weeds.

But the Bermuda Easter lily is still the island's best-known springtime scent. And they're beautiful.

BERMUDA EASTER LILIES — synonymous with spring in this British colony — bloom unexpectedly among century plants above a secluded bay.

Travel lore

See America on $5 a day — stay on a college campus ...

Travel Editor

With all the talk of rising costs — and rumors that some folks are even considering giving up their precious summer vacations for economy reasons, it was a pleasant surprise to run into a new publication the other day that says you can still vacation in America on $5 a day.

The new book, "Mort's Guide to Low-Cost Vacations & Lodgings on College Campuses," describes the facilities of 145 colleges in the United States and Canada which, in the past, have been enjoyed mostly by students, but are now open to travelers.

Frankly, I had never before realized the vacation and travel opportunities available at college and university campuses and in their surrounding areas.

By staying at a nearby college, here are some typical trips you can plan:

- Explore New York City — $84
- One week. For two. Includes lodgings and breakfast
- Seven Days in San Francisco — $87
- For two. Complete with room and board
- Florida Disney World — $112
- One week's lodgings. Four people
- Family Week in Washington, D.C. — $140
- Four people — lodgings only
- Ski Week in Colorado — $115.50
- For two. Includes lodgings, breakfast and dinner
- Sightseeing in Montreal, Canada — $123.80

One week. Four people. Includes lodgings and breakfast.

And there are around 139 other inexpensive trips included in the guide.

The new book points out that swimming, tennis, golf, hiking, fishing and boating are usually available at most campuses — and quite often under uncrowded conditions. Rates are low — usually only $2 to $4 a night for lodgings. Meals at the university coffee shop are cafeteria and quite reasonably priced — like 85 cents for breakfast — $1.25 for lunch — and $1.75 for dinner.

IF YOU'RE looking for the unusual, there's information on where you can find white water canoeing, trekking, scuba diving, mountain climbing, curling, spelunking — and even soaring.

The guide also indicates whether or not rental equipment is available and how much it will cost.

Vacationers who like to pursue their hobbies on their holiday can find places for rock collecting, birdwatching, photography, native arts and crafts — and many others.

As for sightseeing, campus vacations offer plenty of variety of all of America and Canada — from city to wilderness, rodeo to Expo, historic restorations, flyways and waterways, mountains and canyons, amusement parks and national parks, caves and mines, and from painted desert to primal forest.

According to Mort Barish, author of the new guide, his book makes it easy and economical to plan trips and vacations at colleges and universities in 41 states and five Canadian provinces.

He also adds that there's no tipping or parking fees and an abundance of baby sitters.

AT PRESENT, Mort's guide (160 pages with 41 illustrations) is available only from the publisher for $4.50, which includes postage and handling.

Write: Mort's Guide, CMG Publications, Inc., Box 630, Princeton, N.J. 08540.

And — Mort tells me that if you're not satisfied that the book's all we say it is, you can get a full refund on the price of the guide.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR

is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Last year, all John Benson saved was $54.32.

This year, he joined the Payroll Savings Plan.

Poor John. Money just seemed to slip right through his fingers. Every time he planned to stash something away, there wasn't anything left.

Then John decided to join the Payroll Savings Plan where he works. Now, an amount he specifies is automatically set aside from his check before he gets it. And invested in U.S. Savings Bonds.

Because John has become such a systematic saver, he's almost forgotten about it. When he gets around to remembering, he's going to have quite a nest egg laid away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 3 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/2% payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

If you keep forgetting to save something out of your check, join the Payroll Savings Plan and let somebody else do the remembering for you.

Take stock in America. New Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

Ordinance No. 74-29

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTIONS 17-106 AND 17-108 OF THE MUNICIPAL CODE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, 1965

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS:

SECTION ONE: Section 17-106 of the Municipal Code of Arlington Heights, 1965, relating to license period, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 17-106 License Period. The vehicle tax license period for annual issue shall be on a calendar year basis from January 1st to December 31st, provided however, that when approved by the President and Board of Trustees semi-annually in meetings assembled, vehicle tax licenses may be issued beginning on or about November 15th immediately preceding the effective license year at the annual fee for that license period and on or about June 15th of the current license year at one-half annual fee."

SECTION TWO: Section 17-108 of the Municipal Code of Arlington Heights, 1965, relating to annual vehicle tax license fees, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 17-108 Annual Fees. The annual fees shall be determined by the following schedule:

CLASSIFICATION	PERIOD-FEE
Passenger Vehicles	$15.00
Motorcycles	Each Wheel 7.50
Motor Driven Cycles
Motor Scooters
Motor Powered Bicycles
Trucks-Tractors—Including maximum load in pounds.
Truck A 3,000 pounds	Annual $15.00
Truck B 3,001 - 8,000 pounds	Annual 20.00
Truck C 10,000 pounds	Annual 25.00
Truck D 10,001 - 12,000 pounds	Annual 30.00
Truck E 12,001 - 14,000 pounds	Annual 35.00
Truck F 14,001 - 16,000 pounds	Annual 40.00
Truck G 16,001 - 20,000 pounds	Annual 45.00
Truck H 20,001 - Over	Annual 50.00
Trailers	Each Wheel 7.50
Recreational Vehicles	Annual 15.00
Senior Citizens	Annual 1.00
Transients	Annual 1.00
Duplicates	Annual 1.00
Dealers - First Plate -	Annual 25.00
Dealers - All subsequent plates -	Annual 5.00
Half Year - subsequent to June 15th —	50%

After February 15th add $10.00 to passenger fees.

After February 15th add $10.00 to truck plates and all other vehicles. There shall be no increase in the stipulated fees however if application for license is made within 30 days after the applicant has acquired title to such vehicle.

The increments to the fees herein prescribed are assessed to cover the additional costs of administration and not as a penalty and the payment of such increments to the stipulated fee schedule shall not exempt any person, firm or corporation from any penalties imposed for the operation of motor vehicles without proper licenses.

The annual fee for passenger vehicles shall be reduced to $1.00 when the owner of such vehicle is sixty-five (65) years of age or older; provided, however, that the reduction in fee shall apply only to one vehicle license issued to members of the same family."

SECTION THREE: This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval and publication in the manner provided by law.

AYES: 9. NAYS: 0.

Hospital takes bid for local facility before state panel

The Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital will make its pitch for a satellite facility near Buffalo Grove and Wheeling at Wednesday's meeting of the state hospital licensing board in Springfield.

The hospital has gathered sufficient data on the proposed 223-bed satellite branch to be placed on the licensing board's agenda. Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passot will accompany hospital representatives for the hearing.

A decision on whether to license the new facility may be reached Wednesday. Hospital representatives, however, said state approval will be less likely if the satellite branch is not approved at this meeting.

"If we don't get it in this April, it's going to be much tougher for us," said hospital consultant Norman Davis. "The feeling in the state is that we don't need more hospitals, I'd say our hopes are based on April."

THE FRANKLIN Boulevard group will be given about 30 minutes to present plans for the satellite project. Members of the licensing board will then ask questions, and possibly vote on the matter.

If approved, the facility will be built on 10 acres south of Wheeling on the east side of Schoenbeck Road between Dundee and Hintz Roads. The hospital has an option to purchase this property and is negotiating with other nearby property owners to expand the site.

In preparation for the meeting, Davis has compiled an extensive report outlining the potential need for a hospital in the Wheeling-Buffer Grove area. The report includes statistics on current medical habits in Wheeling, projected population figures, data on staffing the facility and a survey of the area's professional medical community.

The Franklin Boulevard representatives have also provided information on zoning, utilities service, road access and other technical data reviewed by the licensing board.

A hospital spokesman said he is not aware of any groups planning to oppose the satellite branch at the meeting Wednesday. He said, however, that regional health-care planning groups may speak out against the project.

MEMBERS OF the Wheeling community have generally favored the hospital project. Village board members repeatedly have spoken out for the Wheeling-area hospital branch, and several community groups have also endorsed the idea.

THE HOSPITAL is being planned to serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove as a primary area, with Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and sections of Lake County providing the secondary service area.

Decisions about the type of services offered by the satellite branch have been delayed until state approval is granted. Currently, however, Franklin Boulevard is not planning to provide either a pediatrics or a maternity ward in the proposed facility.

Pediatrics cases would be handled in private or semi-private rooms, unless there is sufficient community demand for a full pediatrics ward. Prenatal maternity care would be available, but delivery would be scheduled at other nearby hospitals except in emergency cases.

April 27 proclaimed 'flood information day' in village

Buffalo Grove has designated April 27 as "flood information day" and at that time plans to distribute flood control booklets to homeowners.

The booklet was prepared by the flood-control committee, and the village board recently authorized printing of 4,500 at a cost of $1,105. The village plans to distribute the booklets to all single-family homes and townhouses within its limits. Additional copies will be available at village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Village officials originally suggested the booklets be passed out only to residents who responded to last year's flood control survey. They said those who did not respond to the survey probably did not live in homes that are prone to flooding and would not be interested in the booklets.

However, after some thought, the village board decided it would be wise to distribute the booklets to all homeowners, regardless of whether they have had flooding problems in the past. Trustee Clarice Rech, liaison to the flood-control committee, said this would be the fairest way, since all homes in the village could be affected to some degree in the event of a severe storm or power outage.

THE FLOOD-CONTROL committee is seeking help from community organizations to distribute the booklets door to door.

The village board discussed the possibility of mailing the booklets, but decided the door to door distribution would be satisfactory and also would save the village a substantial amount of money. Boy scouts, girl scouts or any other interested organizations are welcome to help deliver the booklets.

According to the flood control committee, the booklet seeks to explain to residents why their homes flood, as well as presenting interim solutions to the problems. The booklet also outlines the steps being taken by the village to alleviate local and regional flooding.

The committee, which spent more than a year preparing the booklet, has emphasized it is not intended as a "do-it-yourself guide." Residents wishing to implement any of the procedures suggested in the booklet should first consult the village.

MANY OF THE procedures described require village building permits, are subject to inspections and therefore should be done by competent contractors, the committee said.

Although numerous flood-control projects have been undertaken in the last several years, officials say an extremely wet year could cause flooding problems in some homes. Last year, flooding was not much of a problem, but the year before, Buffalo Grove and a number of other Northwest suburban communities were severely hit.

The village plans to continue with most of its flood control projects and also plans to start some new ones in the near future. Officials say they hope to eliminate most of the chronic flooding problems in the next few years.

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Village 'plants' to celebrate Arbor Day

Buffalo Grove residents this year as last are urged to plant a tree in observance of Arbor Day. This year the holiday is April 26.

The village's Appearance Control Commission is planning to sell more than 1,200 seedlings to village residents. According to officials, the program is designed to "create an awareness" of Arbor Day.

This week officials plan to distribute information sheets and order blanks to students in all of the village's elementary schools. Students and their parents will have the opportunity to purchase a maximum of four seedlings.

Residents who do not have children in school will be able to order seedlings at the village hall. The red oak seedlings will be six to 12 inches tall and will cost 25 cents each.

In addition, the village will sell three to four-foot red maple seedlings. The larger seedlings will be balled and burlapped and will cost $9 each. These will not be available through the schools.

All the seedlings must be ordered in advance and will be distributed in the schools on Arbor Day and at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., on Saturday, April 27.

STILL ANOTHER project being considered is the planting of a grove of trees at some place of community interest.

Last year the Appearance Control Commission conducted a planting ceremony at the village hall.

Comm. Ronald Helms said Monday his group has not decided whether it will have a planting this year. Before a decision is made, he said the commission will have to find out whether it can get the kinds of trees it wants. If the ceremony is held, it probably will again be adjacent to the municipal building, he said.

Funds to purchase the trees would be obtained from sponsors who in turn would have their names placed beside the tree. The sponsors could be organizations, businesses or individuals, Helms said.

The commission has not approached potential sponsors, Helms said, and will not do so until it is sure it will be able to obtain the trees.

Plan commission to hold special meet Wednesday

The Buffalo Grove Plan Commission will have a special meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the village hall to give final approval to two proposed projects.

Approval will be considered for the model home area for the Winston Square development near Welland Road and Ill. Rte. 83. Centex Homes Corp. plans to build 420 single-family homes and townhouses on the 55-acre site.

In addition, the plan commission will consider final approval for a bank on the south side of Dundee Rd., west of Kingswood Methodist Church.

The special meeting has been called because both developers are anxious to start construction. After the commission's consideration, the projects will go before the village board.

A special meeting was called because the plan commission is authorized to hold only regular meetings and vote on projects on the first and third Wednesdays of the month. The second and fourth Wednesdays are set aside for workshops.

Home gutted by fire

Fire last night gutted a single-family home at 643 St. Mary's Parkway, Buffalo Grove. There were no injuries. Fire Chief Wayne Winter said the blaze started in the kitchen and spread to the second floor. He estimated the fire was burning 45 minutes before the alarm was sounded.

Winter declined to make a damage estimate, saying only the damage was "very heavy." He said the cause of the fire is undetermined.

The residence, owned by Edward Spagnolo, was unoccupied at the time of the fire. Winter said the home was "not livable" and the American Red Cross was arranging lodging for the Spagnolos.

2 incumbents, 2 newcomers seek Dist. 21 board posts

Jeremiah Crise: Expand science curriculum

Expanding the number and kinds of science offerings in Dist. 21 schools is one of the goals Arlington Heights incumbent Jeremiah Crise has in seeking a third three-year term on the school board.

Crise, 611 W. Hintz Rd., believes his six years of experience on the board makes him qualified for the position and he said he has a desire to continue to serve the community.

Crise said he also wants to continue his work with the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC). One of the founders of the cooperative, Crise is currently chairman of the building committee for the Samuel A. Kirk Center in Palatine.

BESIDES INCREASING science courses offered in the district, particularly in the areas of chemistry and physics, Crise said he favors exposing children to as many occupations as possible. He feels the addition of vocational education at the district's three junior high schools will aid in this effort and that it is good the classes will be coeducational. He would also like to see the Elementary Vocational Education (Project EVE) program continued.

Crise said he hopes some legal means will be established in the near future to obtain cash or land donations from developers to help offset the tax impact of their projects on local schools. The school district currently negotiates informally with developers except in Buffalo Grove where the village two years ago enacted a resolution requiring the donations.

Crise feels citizen committees or advisory groups should be initiated by residents themselves when parents feel changes in school operations are needed.

He also favors appointing advisory groups to provide input to the school board on particular projects.

"Citizen groups should be formed when there is a specific job to do," he said. "I think we've done that in the past and that's what has made the district successful. Citizens of the district are our main source of information."

CRISE FEELS there is a good, working relationship between the school board and Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill.

"An organization is only as good as its

Editor's Note: Four candidates are seeking to win two three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board Saturday. Incumbent candidates Jack Lane and Jeremiah Crise are from Arlington Heights, while newcomers Carol Karzen and Alberts Vigants are from Buffalo Grove.

administrators or management," he said. "We've kept well-informed by the administration but we're certainly not a rubber stamp for the superintendent or anyone else."

Because of the building slowdown in the district, Crise does not feel the school board will be in a position soon of having to cut the budget. However, if money became tight, he said he would trim the amount of money spent on programs last.

On the subject of teacher negotiations, Crise said he thinks it is better to conduct closed sessions because "too many opinions are formed when contract information is made public in bits and pieces."

A former president and secretary of the Dist. 21 school board, Crise 43, is employed as superintendent of the fidelity and surety department of St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. He has two children in local schools.

Carol Karzen: More input is needed from community

Evaluate. Recommend. Implement.

These are the three things that Carol Karzen feels every school board member should do before voting on a certain item.

Mrs. Karzen is seeking one of the two three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board against incumbents Jeremiah Crise and Jack Lane, and newcomer Alberts Vigants.

The Buffalo Grove residents feels she is qualified to sit on the school board because — she has children in school; is a clinical psychologist; has a Bachelor of Science degree in Liberal Arts from Northwestern University and a Master of Science degree from Loyola University and she is an artist.

The candidate also sees three main issues in this election. They are:

- Community involvement.
- Financial priorities.
- Development of human potential.

MRS. KARZEN SAID that the community should have more input into the district. She said residents should have an opportunity to evaluate what is going on in the district and make input in the way of recommendations back to the board. The board would then be able to implement the recommendations if they see fit.

She said she does not see this input to the board and feels that this may be a reason for the lack of people attending board meetings. As of her interview, Mrs. Karzen had attended only one school board meeting but said she has reviewed the minutes of such meetings for the last year.

She feels the same citizen input should be made on financial priorities. At the coffees and teas that she has attended during the campaign, Mrs. Karzen told those in attendance two things: "These are my priorities — What are yours?"

She also said less importance should be placed on non-educational spending and more on items that would benefit the students of the district.

Carol Karzen: caucus backed

Mrs. Karzen cited the board's approval of spending $7,500 for a landscaping master plan. She said this money should have been directed to the district's learning center rather than landscaping.

HER MAIN ISSUE, however, is the development of human potential, to see each child development along the broadest possible approach. She would like to see some of the programs currently in Lake County Dist. 96 implemented in Dist. 21. That district operates under the Individually Guided Education.

The only caucus-endorsed candidate in the election, Mrs. Karzen refused comment on whether the Dist. 21 board is controlled by Supt. Kenneth Gill as some caucus members have charged. "I don't want to see in print 'Carol Karzen says Dist. 21 board is a rubber stamp board,'" she said in explaining her refusal to comment.

Mrs. Karzen also originally had no comment about the Dist. 21 Caucus, but later said it's better than anything the district currently has to evaluate candidates and until someone can come up with a better idea, she sees it as a good community organization.

The caucus became an issue in the Dist. 21 election when it endorsed Mrs. Karzen as the only qualified candidate and turned down incumbents Crise and Lane. Vigants did not appear before the caucus.

Jack Lane: Growth over, time for new educational ideas

Jack Lane believes the next five to 10 years will be "the most exciting Dist. 21 has ever seen." The Arlington Heights incumbent school board member is running for a second three-year term because he wants to be in on the action.

Lane feels that because the enrollment in the district is stabilizing and no new schools will be needed for awhile, the school board will be able to concentrate on implementing new educational programs.

"The opportunity of developing educational programs is fantastic if the money holds out," Lane said recently in a Herald interview. Consumer education on the junior high school level is one of the programs Lane would like to see added to the curriculum.

LANE ALSO FEELS the slowdown in school construction will allow the district to upgrade the teacher pay scale and provide more in-service training.

"Salaries in Dist. 21 are not as high as in some surrounding districts," he said. "We could give them a substantial raise this year, but salaries will go up in the other districts, too, so they may still be behind. This is probably one reason why we don't have too many men teachers. But I think it's a workable area and we're going to progress."

Lane said he would like to see teacher contract negotiations conducted publicly. The sessions were open two years ago, but closed last year and this year.

Lane has been criticized for his poor attendance at school board meetings in the past. He has missed the majority of meetings in the past year.

HOWEVER, Lane said his work schedule has recently been revised and he feels he will be able to attend all meetings in the future and devote the necessary time to school board business. He is presently sales manager and a salesman for G. E. Mack.

Jack Lane: Incumbent

"Had the change in my job not occurred, I wouldn't be running," he said. Lane added that if his workload should increase again to the point that it interferes with serving on the school board, he will resign.

Commenting on the relationship between the school board and Supt. Kenneth Gill, Lane said, "I don't think any member on the board would hesitate to question Gill or any member of the staff. This is not a rubber stamp board. Maybe people think it is and that impression probably comes from our dependence on the administration."

LANE'S GOALS in the next three years include implementing the new vocational education programs at the district's three junior high schools and adopting better methods of evaluating student study habits. He also would like to see more in-service workshops for teachers to help them "make children better-equipped to live in this changing society."

In addition, he would like to see more community involvement and input to the school board from local PTA and PTO groups.

Lane is the father of four children who presently attend Dist. 21 schools.

Arlington Park officials hope for big racing year

by KURT BAUER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomer told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to rise and whose revenues continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomer told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.6 million between 1969 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomer reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinsey, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was boosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Richmond High choir concert set tonight

The Richmond, Ind. High School choir will present a concert today at 8 p.m. at Buffalo Grove High School.

The choir has been invited by the Buffalo Grove choral department and the Indiana students will stay with Buffalo Grove students.

The concert will include music from Bach to Bacharach and is free.

Wheeling township annual meet tonight

Wheeling Township will hold its annual meeting today at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

The Board of Auditors will consider federal revenues — sharing allocations of approximately $200,000 for mental health services and programs and $9,000 for an additional truck for the township highway commissioner.

To date the township has received more than $250,000 of revenue-sharing money and anticipates about $200,000 for the 1974-75 fiscal year. The township is in the process of drafting a revenue-sharing budget of approximately $470,000.

Revenue sharing, which began in 1972, is a program that local taxing bodies are given federal money to spend as they wish under loose federal guidelines.

Fashion show today at high school

Casual and sportswear will be shown today at 9:30 a.m. in a fashion show at Buffalo Grove High School.

Twenty-five models will show the fashions, some of them sewn by students. The show, in the school theater, is open to the public.

Alberts Vigants: His concern — early childhood education

"Everybody should have an opportunity to be on the school board. I'm just a plain citizen and that's what I'm running on," said Alberts Vigants of Buffalo Grove.

Vigants is seeking one of two available three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board in the April 13 election.

As the father of three pre-schoolers, Vigants is concerned about early childhood education and would like to see pre-kindergarten classes adopted as part of the Dist. 21 curriculum. He suggested seeking state and federal funds to help underwrite the cost of such classes.

Vigants is also interested in promoting a freer flow of information from the school board to the community.

Citizens' groups could be valuable to the school board, Vigants said, and should be used as much as possible to provide input from district residents on school matters.

Vigants suggested establishing a committee of parents and teachers, for example, to review textbooks under consideration before books are adopted for use in the district. Local PTA, PTO and PTC groups, he said, could provide people to aid in similar projects also.

Commenting on the practice of requiring housing developers to contribute land or cash to help offset the impact of their projects on local schools, Vigants said he doesn't feel it is fair to single out builders.

"I don't see the reasoning behind it," he said. "I don't know why builders should be assessed if you're not going to ask for money from all the other business people, too."

Vigants said he feels referendums are a more just way of providing new schools that become necessary as the student population of the district increases.

Vigants feels schools should provide children with as many and as varied experiences as possible. He believes a well-rounded curriculum is essential and would like to see more music and art classes in Dist. 21.

A resident of the village since 1969, Vigants is employed as an electronic manufacturing engineer with Simpson Electric Co. in Elgin.

Vigants received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Minnesota and the Milwaukee School of Engineering in 1959. He, his wife, Ausma, and their children, live at 760 MacArthur Dr.

Mikva-Young race a battle of reformers?

by STEVE BROWN

It is beginning to look like voters in the 11th Congressional District may be faced with two reformers on the ballot in November and the major issue might become who can out-reform the other.

U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, brought out a string of campaign spending limits last week and challenged his opponent, former Congressman Abner Mikva of Evanston, to accept the stringent proposals.

"It is a useful idea to have joint reforms, but I don't think he is serious," said Mikva, who in 1972 teamed with Young to run the most expensive congressional campaign in Illinois.

YOUNG PROPOSED that both he and Mikva limit 1974 campaign spending to $100,000 each, that no contributions be accepted except from persons who either live or work in the district, that individual contributions be limited to $3,000 and that each candidate accept no more than $10,000 from his respective party's congressional campaign committee.

"I am calling Mikva's bluff," Young told The Herald Monday. He added that the public feels there is too much money spent on the campaign.

Mikva, who said he plans to frame a "constructive response" to Young's proposals in the next day or two, scoffed at the spending suggestions.

"It just looks like a gimmick to get the incumbent reelected," the former two-term congressman said. Mikva has already set a $3,000 ceiling on contributions from any one individual or group.

MIKVA TERMED the provision limiting the contributions to persons who live or work in 10th Congressional District as "ridiculous."

"I don't have $10,000 friends like Stone or Terra who live in the district," Mikva said. He was referring to sizable campaign contributions made by insurance tycoon W. Clement Stone and Daniel Terra of Northbrook to Young during the 1972 campaign.

Mikva also questioned what would happen to funds raised by Young during 1973, which included nearly $36,000 from a dinner which headlined presidential adviser Alexander Haig as the featured speaker.

Young said Monday that his campaign spending proposals would include only funds raised in 1974 and not previous years.

He added that if Mikva accepts the spending suggestions he would be willing to return contributions from special interest or lobbying organizations.

According to campaign reports that both men have filed with federal authorities, Mikva raised $52,079 between Jan. 1, 1973, and March 12, 1974, while Young received $76,014 during the same period.

IN REACTING to Young's proposals, Mikva also questioned how Young intends to use his congressional staff during the campaign.

Young said he does not plan to use his staff in the campaign, but that they are free to volunteer to work for him during non-business time with no pay.

Mikva said that during the 1972 campaign, any member of his staff who worked on his campaign was paid with campaign contributions and not with tax funds.

However, Mikva noted that an incumbent congressman had a problem differentiating between campaign work and congressional work.

"I'm not sure that I would favor rigid rules regarding the use of staff in the campaign," Mikva said, adding that he did oppose the mailing of what could be labeled campaign material in franked envelopes.

CONGRESSMEN ARE allowed to use the mails free for sending materials concerning their congressional activities, but the franking privilege does not extend to mailing campaign material.

Young said if the campaign spending suggestions are accepted it would have its greatest effect on the number of campaign workers that could be hired.

"Both of us would have to depend on volunteers, but that is all right, let's keep it to volunteers."

He added that he would not implement the suggestions if Mikva rejected his proposals.

"I would be a damn fool to do this on my own, but we would make some adjustments on our own," Young said.

YOUNG SAID HE HAD reconsidered a statement he made last month, where he said that spending limits might favor the incumbents. He said that both he and Mikva have about the same recognition in the district.

Mikva termed Young's proposals a "con game," adding that "he is confusing a very important issue." Mikva has already made public reports of contributions he has received since declaring his candidacy in November.

He clarified the substantial contributions he has received from political education committees of various organized labor groups as a collection of many small contributions from union members, "many of whom live in the district."

Early campaign contributions reported to federal authorities indicated that the Mikva-Young race could be the most expensive congressional race in the nation this year.

Goodbye, Rocky

Mark's pet crow, to the disgust of the neighbors, has proven itself to be the nuisance of Des Plaines

by BOB GALLAS

Like many others, Mark Moeller's pet greets him every morning, accompanies him to school, likes to play games and even waits for his master to get out of class. However "Rocky" isn't your average household dog or cat—he's a crow.

Mark, an eighth grader at Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, has had Rocky for almost a year, since the crow was only about a week old. However, complaints from neighbors irked at some of Rocky's antics, are forcing Mark to get rid of his pet.

A fixture around the Moeller's Des Plaines home, Rocky comes and goes as he pleases through an open window in the garage where he roosts on a ladder. Although he spends most of his day outside, Rocky returns by dark nightly to dine on his favorite delicacies—dogfood, cornflakes and peanut butter.

ROCKY WAITS, perched on overhead wires near the Moeller home every morning, waiting for Mark to leave for school. He spends half of the walk perched atop Mark's shoulder. The other half, he just flies along.

Once at school, Rocky's a hit with the other students who roll marbles which Rocky retrieves and brings back.

During the warm months, the crow will wait at an intersection near the school, waiting for his master to come by after school.

Rocky's antics, while endearing him to some, have irritated others around the block. His best trick was probably divebombing a neighbor, snatching the unsuspecting victim's keys out of his hand.

Another of his favorites is to get under somebody's pantcuff and pull down socks or untie shoes.

ROCKY ALSO likes to divebomb the ball during a neighborhood basketball or volleyball game and takes particular delight in the tail of the Moeller's pet dog, Bambi.

Rocky, who the Moellers found out recently should be called Roxanne, also likes a little bread—soaked in whiskey. Mark said he had to discontinue the practice after Rocky got drunk.

"He was flying around sideways and divebombing everything in sight," said Mark.

ROCKY ALSO has a one word vocabulary, of "who," taught to him by Mark. "He used to bark like a dog when he was a baby because he was around the dog so much," said Mark. "He doesn't do that anymore."

A family friend will take Rocky soon, setting him free near his home in Chicago. Although it usually only happens in the movies, Mark is hoping Rocky will follow in the footsteps of Lassie, overcoming tremendous obstacles to find his way home.

IF NOT, MARK will go back to walking to school alone and the motorists along the route won't be wondering what was in their morning coffee anymore.

Library annexation vote slated today

Residents of a portion of unincorporated Maine Township and Niles will go to the polls today to vote on a referendum that seeks approval to annex a two-square-mile tract into the Niles Public Library District.

If the referendum is approved, the library district would nearly double the number of persons which it now serves, according to Frances S. Allen, library administrator.

The referendum seeks voter approval to annex a tract bordered by the Tri-State Tollway and Milwaukee Avenue north of Dempster Street, except for those areas already served by a library district.

THE DISTRICT presently operates its main library at 6860 Oakton St., Niles and a demonstration library in the second floor of the Golf Mill State Bank, with funds provided through a federal grant.

Allen said the district currently levies a tax of just under .15, or 15 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation. He said an additional levy of .03, or 3 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation, is made to retire capital improvement bonds.

Allen estimated that about 25,000 persons now live in the area which would be annexed into the library district. He added that if the annexation is approved, about $60 million in assessed valuation would be added to the district's tax rolls.

Presently, persons who live in the area are not served by any library and they must pay fees ranging between $20 to $30 to take advantage of library services in adjoining communities.

Allen also noted that if the referendum is approved there will be no increase in taxes to any persons who now live within the district.

IN ADDITION to the services already offered by the library district, persons will also be able to take advantage of the North Suburban Library System, which includes a cooperative book borrowing program with other libraries in communities throughout the area.

Allen said the polls will be open tomorrow from noon to 8 p.m. Persons who live in the proposed annexation area and who already reside within the district boundaries must both vote to approve the annexation before the referendum can be approved.

Residents who live in the area which the library district proposes to annex may vote at Stevenson School, 9003 Capitol, if they live south of Golf Road or at Apollo Junior High School, 10100 Dee Rd., Des Plaines, if they live north of Golf Road.

Bargaining talks between city officials, police resume

City officials and representatives of Des Plaines patrolmen were to return to the bargaining table Monday night, according to Mike Albrecht, president of the local policemen's union.

Albrecht said Monday that attorneys for the Combined Counties Police Assn., the bargaining agent for local police, received a letter from city officials requesting the talks be resumed.

The negotiations session was scheduled for Monday and details were not available.

"We're going back to the table and that's the main thing," Albrecht said Monday.

City overtones for resumption of the negotiations, bogged down since mid-March, followed a statement by Mayor Herbert Behrel late last month that he would instruct city Corporation Counsel Robert D'Leonardi to schedule a new round of talks.

THE BARGAINING stalemate and talks were broken off when a dispute snowballed between the two sides over a police demand that a new, separate police credit union be created.

Police representatives later contended, however, the real reason for the deadlock was because city bargainers made no wage offer to police. CCPA officials also accused the city of bargaining in bad faith for not discussing salaries.

Both sides charged each other with breaking off the talks. CCPA Pres. John Flood later told The Herald that police would consider any alternatives, including a strike and "blue-flu" epidemic, to bring about salary negotiations.

Flood said last month though, that local patrolmen would have taken no such action until after the April 30 expiration date of the contract between the city and police.

Albrecht said he was pleased negotiations were to be resumed, adding he hopes wages would be discussed. There have been reports that police are seeking a 12 to 13 per cent pay boost.

Suspect in Elk Grove slaying denied bond

A 56-year-old Elk Grove Township man was ordered held without bond Monday on charges that he shot to death a man who was seeing his daughter.

The suspect, Daniel Torres, 2845 Higgins Rd., appeared in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court before Associate Judge James Maher. He was charged with murder.

According to Cook County Sheriff's police, Torres shot and killed a Chicago man, Hector Cardona, 24, of 3039 Canal St., early Sunday.

Torres, who speaks little English, had to be questioned in court by Maher through an interpreter.

Lt. Howard Vanick, a sheriff's investigator, said the shooting occurred at the door of the Torres trailer in lot 16 of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, 2845 E. Higgins Rd., when Cardona and another man came to see Torres' daughter.

ter, Felicitia, 30. The woman was not home when the men showed up.

VANICK SAID Torres was upset that Cardona, who is married, was dating his daughter. When Cardona identified himself as the man who was dating the girl, Torres went and got his .25-caliber automatic pistol, and shot Cardona.

Torres reportedly turned the weapon over to Elk Grove Village police who were called to the scene minutes later and the man was taken into custody when sheriff's police arrived.

Cardona, employed as a laborer at Rockford Paper Mill in Des Plaines, was pronounced dead on arrival with gunshot wounds in the chest at Alexian Brothers Medical Center. Hospital spokesmen said the body was turned over to the county coroner's office.

Vanick said he knew of no past association between the two men and there was no argument before the shooting.

VANICK SAID neither Cardona's friend, nor another man inside the trailer with Torres, were injured by the shots. The suspect, an unemployed double amputee, offered police no resistance, according to accounts.

Torres was taken to county jail where he will be held until an April 16 hearing in Niles branch of circuit court.

seph Slonina stopped the car at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street about 6 p.m.

Slonina reported noticing O'Mara drinking what appeared to be a can of beer while driving. Beer was found in the car, some of it opened, along with a quantity of what later tested to be marijuana. O'Mara reportedly told police the marijuana was his and the two were taken into custody.

They were released on bond and are to appear in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court May 2.

Prospect teen arrested in drug case

A Mount Prospect youth was charged with possession of marijuana after Des Plaines police said they found a quantity of the substance and some liquor in his auto.

Police Sunday arrested Michael O'Mara, 18, of 213 Maple, Mount Prospect, and Craig Kovar, 19, of 429 Windsor, Arlington Heights. The marijuana charge was brought against O'Mara. Kovar was charged with possession and transportation of open liquor in an auto.

According to reports, the two were arrested when Des Plaines Patrolman Jo-

Minorities being sought for training program

The Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows has begun recruiting unskilled minority workers to participate in a 32-week training program with the Village of Arlington Heights.

Bruce Newton, Northwest Opportunity Center Director, said Friday he has received three complete applications for the work study program which is intended to teach unemployed persons some basic skills needed to get a job.

Eventually, the village hopes 25 people will enroll in the program, most of them Spanish-speaking persons living in the Northwest part of Cook County.

PARTICIPANTS WILL work two days a week at maintenance or clerical jobs with the village and attend two days of classes at Harper College. They will be paid $2.10 an hour for time spent in the program.

The low wage is making it difficult to enroll people in the job skill program, which is being funded through Cook County.

"The program is especially appealing to persons on public aid, if they can arrange for child care," Newton said. "We don't see much chance of attracting someone who's already working."

Newton said the job training program was "long overdue for this part of Cook County" and he said that he was "fairly optimistic" enough people will be enrolled to make the program work.

CONTACTS ARE BEING made with some industries in the area to try to find jobs for the trainees after the 32 week program ends, Newton says.

In addition to Northwest Opportunity Center, 3411 Kirchoff Rd., information about the program has been distributed to Head Start centers and public aid counselors, he said.

While no work experience is required to qualify for the job training, an understanding of basic spoken English is necessary.

Additional information is available from the personnel office at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Oakton board applications accepted through Thursday

Applications for appointment to a vacancy on the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees will be taken through Thursday, according to Paul Gilson, chairman of the college board.

The vacancy was caused by the resignation of Trustee Robert Gutschick last week. Gutschick, 24, was arrested March 28 for allegedly selling LSD to undercover agents from the Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG).

Thursday the board will appoint Gutschick's successor for the remaining year of his term. A closed session of the board is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. followed by an open session at 8:30.

Gilson has refused to reveal the names of the applicants saying he does not want to embarrass those who are not chosen for the seat on the board. Gilson said persons seeking the appointment should send a resume to the college, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove. He said Friday he would like to receive applications no later than today but he would accept them up to the time of the meeting Thursday.

Candidates must be at least 21 years of age, must reside in the college district, and be registered voters.

The vacancy must be filled by appointment since the deadline has passed for placing it on the ballot in college elections Saturday. Whoever is appointed will serve until April, 1975.

Water-rate hike testimony ended

Testimony in the request of Citizens Utilities Co. to raise sewer and water rates was wrapped up Monday. A ruling by the Illinois Commerce Commission is expected to be handed down in August.

Citizens, an Addison-based firm, is seeking to raise utility rates for the New Town section of Mount Prospect and the Waycinden Park subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township near Des Plaines.

Duane A. Feuer, an attorney representing the Mount Prospect homeowners, said after the 3½-hour session, "I'm happy with how it's going so far. What the commission is going to do in August is anybody's guess."

Citizens is attempting to raise water rates from $3 to $6 a month, and minimum sewer rates from $4.50 to $7 a month.

Monday's testimony consisted of cross examination by Citizens of two witnesses called by objectors to the rate hike. Several residents who testified earlier about utility service were not recalled for cross examination, though Citizens reserved the right to question them later.

In the next phase of the four-month old hearings, the ICC staff will prepare a report of its findings, incorporating data provided by both the firm and the objectors during their testimony.

The staff report will be cross examined by both the pro-and anti-rate increase sides May 7, and staff rebuttal is scheduled for May 21. The staff will then prepare its final recommendations for the five-member ICC board.

Drug education program at school

A program on drugs and drug education will be presented by the Cook County Education Service Region today at 7:30 p.m. at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The program will feature representatives from the University of Illinois, the Chicago Board of Education and the Cook County Sheriff's Youth Service Department. Cook County School Supt. Richard J. Martwick will also participate in the program.

Topics of discussion will include "Drug Education in the Schools," "Community Impact on Drug Usage" and "Community Agencies."

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsman, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further falling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Upswing in racing profits seen

Arlington Park hopes for big year

by KURT BAUER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomer told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to rise and whose revenues continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomer told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.8 million between 1969 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomer reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinley, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was boosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Another feature of Secretariat's appearance — an open infield at Arlington Park — may be repeated for some of the bigger weekend races this year, according to track spokesman Tom Rivera.

The grass area would be open to spectators anxious to combine picnicking or sunbathing with their race watching.

The Secretariat Handicap is one of five major races scheduled at Arlington this summer.

Purses of $100,000 added will be offered for the American Derby on Saturday, Aug. 24, and the Arlington Handicap on Saturday, Sept. 7.

The Arlington-Washington Futurity, set for Labor Day, is expected to gross $200,000 this year and will be the Midwest's richest horse race.

The Lassie, with an estimated purse of $100,000, will be held the Saturday of the Labor Day weekend.

SUMMER GASOLINE supplies also figure to play an important part in track officials' hopes for the upcoming season. Earlier this year, Loomer identified gas shortages as the single biggest threat to race track attendance.

Even if gasoline is available, Rivera says he expects more fans will use the new, Arlington Park train depot.

A new electronic tote board has been installed at the track and a number of maintenance improvements are being made in the backstretch, in line with the recommendations of an administrative task force appointed last October by Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson.

Improvements include planting a number of trees in the stable area, the construction of some new comfort stations for track employees, and the painting of some barns and dormitories.

Concession prices for track patrons probably will not be increased, Rivera says, and the $1.50 general admission fee is unchanged.

"All in all, things look very, very bright," says Thayer.

Indeed it would seem that if Arlington Park is ever going to reestablish its claim to being one of the five top tracks in the country, 1974 must be the year.

3 Berwyn youths arrested in brawl

Three Berwyn youths were arrested after a brawl in a local tavern that sent one man to the hospital and included two off-duty Des Plaines patrolmen who stepped in to break up the fracas.

Charged with disorderly conduct were James Uher, 18, of 6538 W. 27th; James B. McWhorter, 18, of 6546 12th and John Polonsik, 19, of 2520 Elmwood, all of Berwyn. A fourth youth with them was not charged.

According to reports, the fight broke out at the Beacon Tap, 1374 Lee St., early Sunday after an argument among two of the youths, a bartender and patrons.

The youths reportedly were asking directions to Berwyn when one began using obscene language, was asked to stop, and the scuffle began.

The two policemen, David Hachmeister and John Stephens, then stepped in to break up the melee.

A Rosemont man, Robert Currer, 28, of 10491 Davis Ct., reportedly was hit with a beer glass and had to be taken to Holy Family Hospital, where he was treated for minor cuts.

Uher, McWhorter and Polonsik later were freed on $1,000 bond. They will appear May 6 in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Scouting news

Walter Powers recently represented the Northwest Suburban Council at a three-day state citizenship program in Springfield.

Wally is 14 years old and a freshman at Forest View High School. He recently earned his 42nd merit badge and is an active member of the National Eagle Scout Assn.

The highlight of the visit was the governor's luncheon where he met Gov. Daniel Walker. The 29 Eagle Scouts attending the luncheon held an election and Wally was elected state comptroller. He toured the business office and spent time with George Lindberg, state controller.

Wally is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Powers, 330 Baker Pl., Des Plaines.

Burglars hit two homes, garage

Burglars netted nearly $600 in goods and possessions during thefts at two Des Plaines homes and a garage, according to police.

Henry Senk told police someone forced his way into Senk's home at 1572 Webster Ln. Thursday and stole a color television set and cash. The burglary totaled $480, according to reports.

Burglars also made off with $95 in cash, food and liquor after entering the apartment of Maureen Merritt, 115 Dover Dr., police said.

The woman's son, Edward, told police he was returning home from school Thursday afternoon and noticed the place ransacked.

Taken were several bottles of liquor, undetermined amounts of food, a tape player along with $5 in cash.

Dolores Sullivan, 2688 Rusty Dr., told police thieves took a wheel cover worth $30 from her auto.

Hot race in Dist. 62

— Stories by Dorothy Oliver, Linda Punch

Philip Bock:

'We need outside opinions'

Dist. 62 board incumbent Philip Bock sees a need for board members to "seek individual sources of input about the school system — from visiting schools, attending coffees and PTA meetings."

The 36-year-old Des Plaines resident said board members have a tendency to "lean too heavily on the administration. We need to have a number of sources of input about the district. At the same time, we have to be careful we don't pull the rug out from under the administration."

A one-year member of the board, Bock said Des Plaines has "an excellent school system — the cost is reasonable, the management generally good." The entire district "suffered in public opinion" as a result of last fall's contract dispute, he added. "Last year, nobody won — everybody came out with a black eye," he said.

BOCK SAID it's easier to judge events with "the benefit of hindsight" but he felt board actions taken during the contract dispute were "by and large reasonable."

"I think we should have considered taking our side of negotiations to the public earlier and sought professional negotiations assistance," he said.

Financially, Bock said, the district "looks pretty good. The future looks reasonably bright but we won't know until we get into the budgeting cycle."

"Since the referendum, we've been running in the black. The budget has been somewhat misleading though, since we had $200,000 in back taxes added on to $400,000 in 1973-74," he said.

"We're obviously spending more than we're bringing in this year. If the trend continues, we'll be in trouble," he added.

Bock is a seven-year resident of Des Plaines. He has four children attending South School and Iroquois Junior High School. He is midwest region manager of logistics and distribution for Xerox Corp.

On other issues:
The Caucus: "I have no difficulty with the caucus endorsing more than one person for each position. There's no reason why the caucus can't recommend all qualified candidates."

Teacher power: "School boards are going to have to stop and be conscious of the needs and desires of all employees. We're not going to be able to give them all they want but at least we can listen. Employees all over the country are demanding greater voice — they want to be recognized as individuals with ideas to contribute. Teachers are no different."

Changing boundaries: "If enrollment changes merit it, I can see moving to redistrict boundaries. I see doing it with careful study and planning and doing it one time. I don't want to be jerking people around from year to year."

Board-teacher relations: "Nobody communicates very well if they wait until a confrontation to sit down and shout at each other across a bargaining table. The problem is teachers don't often see the board — they picture us in an ivory tower."

Board-community relations: "I have the feeling the board didn't do a good job in getting its point of view across. We should have been more aggressive in carrying our side to the public."

Bus transportation: "I'm in favor of getting good reliable buses giving courteous on-time services. In the absence of any specific complaints, I can't say to do away with United Motor Coach."

Stuart Kisten:

'My experience is valuable'

by LINDA PUNCH

Dist. 62 incumbent Stuart Kisten decided to seek reelection "because I felt I owed a responsibility to the community."

"I feel the experience I've gained in the past three years is something none of the others had," he said. "If I didn't run I'd be letting the community down."

A member of the board's negotiations team during last fall's contract dispute, Kisten said more information about contract bargaining should be made public.

"I feel that the demands and offers from both sides should be made known to the public," he said.

THE 14-YEAR Des Plaines resident attributes the problems of last fall's negotiations to a "variety of things." Noting that many of the classroom teachers were attending college during the 1960s, Kisten said "we have a lot of new young teachers who felt the only way to get action was to demonstrate."

Kisten said he thinks some pressure was "brought to bear" by the Illinois Education Assn. "I don't think the IEA is particularly bad — I am concerned if they are taking control out of the community."

Financially, Kisten said he foresees no difficulties for the district.

Even with a continued decline in enrollment, Kisten said there should be no "drastic cutbacks" in teaching staff. "I think normal attrition would take care of any decline," he said. "We've already had a five per cent drop in enrollment — there are no cases where any teachers were terminated."

KISTEN, 1735 Sycamore, is an internal auditor with Benefit Trust Life Insurance Co. He has been active in the South Side Little League.

On other issues:

The Caucus: "Since there has been some criticism and pressure, perhaps in the future we should be endorsing a minimum of at least one additional candidate."

Teacher power: "Teachers should have a voice but as far as making policy, I think it's up to the elected board members. The board would consult teachers and administrators but I think the elected officials are the ones to make the final decision. They're subject to recall at the polls."

Changing boundaries: "The subject comes up occasionally but I don't think the situation is such that we need to redistrict. I would stay away from boundary change unless it's absolutely necessary."

Board-teacher relations: "I think a great deal of progress has been made in that direction. One of the difficulties with the elections so soon after the dispute is there are still some frayed feelings around. I think we could improve channels of communication by some direct meetings with teachers."

Board-community relations: "I think we could have done a better job in communicating with the public. I think it's a goal we're striving for now." As far as the board being a rubber stamp of the administration,

"There is a great deal of discussion at committee meetings — some issues are hotly debated. When we go to a board meeting, we've done our homework."

Bus transportation: "I feel United Motor Coach needs a lot of work. Some of the equipment is not very good and isn't up to safety standards. I think we should give them an opportunity to improve."

Robert Meute:

'Negotiations ran too long'

by LINDA PUNCH

Dist. 62 board candidate Robert Meute said he decided to seek election "because I could no longer afford to be an apathetic citizen."

Meute, a 16-year resident of Des Plaines, said he became "concerned about the problems in the school district" during last fall's contract dispute. "I don't think the board handled itself with the community and teachers as well as it could have."

"I think the individual board members were sincerely trying their best but 11 months is too long to run negotiations," Meute added.

Financially, the Oak Park High School teacher said he thinks the district is in "pretty good shape." He said he would "hesitate cutting back teachers unless absolutely necessary."

"If it's going to hurt the kids, I'm going to think long and hard before taking such a step," he said.

MEUTE ALSO sees financial problems caused by the energy crisis. "We have to consider how much it's going to cost to heat and air condition buildings — we have to be careful on how it affects the children but also realize we have to pay the bill," he said.

Meute said board members have a "duty to question administrative policy." "The board has to do its homework so it can understand what the administration is planning and doing," he said.

"Some school board votes seem to be a rubber stamp type of thing. I have to say in their defense, if they've done their homework and studied the proposal before them, it might not in reality be a rubber stamp vote."

Meute has been a French teacher at Oak Park and River Forest high schools for 10 years. He formerly taught in the Maine Township high schools. A former member of the Iroquois Civic Assn., he was a representative to the school board caucus.

A MEMBER of the Illinois Education Assn. and the American Assn. of Teachers of French, Meute said he has "a knowledgeable concern and interest in educational goals, and techniques."

On other issues:
The Caucus: — "The caucus

should nominate more than one person for each position slotted. I'm sure they could find enough qualified people. The question is whether the election is to be decided in February or this coming Saturday."

Teacher power: "The teachers must advise the board and administration on their desires and viewpoints. Teachers shouldn't have the power to break the school district financially. They can't say pay us this money — I don't care where you get it."

Changing boundaries: Redistricting is "a possibility" to relieve any overcrowded schools. "The board has to be careful when moving kids — I'd like to see it handled on a voluntary basis."

Board-teacher relations: The board and teachers' union reached an impasse in contract negotiations "because of a certain amount of polarization on both sides. I see a need to bring an atmosphere of trust between the board and teachers." The hiring of a professional negotiator is "a possible good step but I favor the formation of a council of teachers, administrators and board members to sit down on a regular basis to talk."

Board-community relations: I think the board should be open to the community. The community pays the bill and has many resources to offer."

Bus transportation: "I think we have to ask bus companies to show the buses are safe. The district has to have bids on bus service and must investigate each company thoroughly."

Mary Kinser:

'I'd have a healing influence'

Mary Kinser believes the Dist. 62 Board of Education needs another woman and an educator. The wife, mother and former teacher not only feels she is qualified but that she would have "a healing influence" in the district if elected.

"My husband and I have been in all kinds of civic organizations and have led diverse groups to common goals. I don't know how the healing can be done — perhaps we could form a council with representatives from the board, administration, teachers and parents where all factions would be able to talk things out. We could try and circumvent many problems before they become so great no one can back down."

Mrs. Kinser said she was asked for years to run for the school board but waited until her children were in college to do so. Although rejected by the caucus when she appeared before the screening committee, Mrs. Kinser felt the time was right to run — "I think new blood is needed."

MRS. KINSER, of 973 Margret, believes the public is entitled to know what the board is doing. "The taxpayers are the supporters. There is too much secrecy at board meetings. Meetings are so short, so cut and dried — they're just rubber-stamp meetings."

Although she believes it too early to tell how teacher contract negotiations are going, Mrs. Kinser said she is happy that the initial sessions went well and hopeful.

Active in the community, Mrs. Kinser was the founder of the Young Footlighters, and is a member of the Des Plaines Civil Defense, Safety Council, American Assn. of University Women, League of Women Voters and Theater Guild.

On other issues:

The Caucus: "I don't think school elections should be unopposed. When you say election that means choice. If you want a school board picked by a caucus go to Springfield and change the school code so board members are appointed."

Mary Kinser

Teacher Power: "When you have trust between the community, board, teachers and administration I don't think you have to give out so much power. I don't think teachers really wanted all they said they did (during past negotiations). When you negotiate you always ask for more than you expect to get."

Changing Boundaries: "They should be changed periodically. Things should be surveyed every so often. If people are told in the right way and if it's a logical course of events I don't think there would be mass uprisings."

Board-Teacher Relations: "I think there is bitterness, distrust and lack of respect on both sides. Negotiations shouldn't have taken 11 months to complete. We've always known the teachers to be very conservative and never thought they'd be involved in a strike. We were amazed at the feelings the teachers had, the frustration I don't want to throw blame at either side and I don't know if it could have been prevented."

Board-Community Relations: "I don't know if too many people in the community know what's going on. I don't know if it's apathy. If elected I would like to see that there is an input from the community."

Bus Transportation: "Of course the board should be involved. Safety and education — that's what the board is for. We're pretty lucky a tragedy hasn't happened here."

Jay Kuchel:

'I'll do my own investigating'

A last-minute entry into the Dist. 62 Board of Education race, Jay Kuchel became the sixth board candidate "because I think there's a need for an independent voice."

"As an independent I'm going to listen and do my own investigating on issues. I'm going out to get information to make decisions. You can't make a good decision if you are going to get all your information from one side," he said.

Kuchel, the father of four, has spent the last several weeks visiting the schools in the district to listen, learn and get those facts. "I hope to visit all the schools before the election. I like to see things for myself."

THE 15-YEAR Des Plaines resident first became interested in a board position during last year's teacher contract negotiations. He attended teacher coffees and classifies himself as a "concerned parent."

Kuchel feels the board could have handled the negotiations problems better and said, "If I was completely satisfied with the board I wouldn't be running."

He feels the board's hiring of a professional negotiator should alleviate some of the problems that have arisen in the past.

KUCHEL IS A salesman for Prudential Insurance Co., and a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Des Plaines who served two terms as an elder of the church. He and his family live at 340 Pinehurst.

On other issues:

The Caucus: "I don't feel it's a good policy to endorse three candidates for three board openings or two for two. If qualified candidates are available the caucus should endorse and nominate them. One PTA member told me their caucus delegate is one who never goes to anything. If I'm elected and the caucus would decide three years hence that they'll endorse me I don't know whether I would welcome that endorsement."

Teacher Power: "There are certain things that have to be left to the administration, certain decisions that have to be made. I think we run into problems with the lack of communications. We have a situation here where people in the home office don't know what's going on in the field."

Changing Boundaries: "If it becomes an issue we will have to look at all the alternatives. Discussions will have to revolve around the PTAs and parents. I feel we could work out a satisfactory agreement. You don't get along with people if you try and shove something down their throats. If my kids were involved I would certainly listen, but I'd have to also know the facts."

Board-Teacher Relations: "There is a strain there. There seems to be a polarization of attitudes on both sides that has to be worked out. The teachers attitude seems to be one of a lack of trust and it seems logical to me that this is the problem. If we are going to maintain a quality education system in the district we have to resolve this. I think board members should sit down with teachers once in a while and get in to discussions. I have some time so once in a while I can go to a school and do this."

Board-Community Relations: "There is no problem here unless negotiations get hot. People are not that concerned. There is no problem as long as everybody is working fine, getting along together and not making waves."

Bus Transportation: "I think improvements could be made to the bus system. I know this is a sore point with some people. Bus transportation has to be handled in such a way that it is safe for the kids. That's really the crux of the matter and the board should look into this."

Wallace Meyer:

'Conservative in money matters'

by DOROTHY OLIVER

When the Dist. 62 caucus endorsed Wallace Meyer over an incumbent candidate, he was more surprised than anyone.

Meyer, 2181 Plainfield, was approached by a caucus member three years ago and asked to try for the board. He didn't take the step at that time but put his name before the caucus this year thinking he wouldn't get the endorsement but would try again next year.

He was slated, however, and quickly began working with the other two caucus-backed candidates to win the election. Although the three are working as a team, each has maintained they have separate opinions and ideas.

Meyer terms himself "conservative in money matters." "I would hope we could maintain the schools without raising taxes. A school board is like somebody on a fixed income — like a senior citizen. I would hope to keep the budget within the present tax system."

At the same time the father of three emphasizes "we can't be conservative in educational policies such as team teaching — that's one method that has done wonders for one of my children."

MEYER BELIEVES one of the school board's major problems is lack of public interest. "We spend their money, teach their children — if they don't care it's really too bad." He added when he and his wife served on a Dist. 62 referendum committee they were better informed than most parents, "but we weren't that well informed."

Besides working on the referendum committee, Meyer is a past legislative chairman of the Plainfield PTA, has worked with the U.P. Mariners Port of Chicago and is an umpire in the Des Plaines Little League. The 11-year resident is a manager of commercial group insurance for the Fireman's Fund, American Insurance Co.

On other issues:

The Caucus: "I can't think of a better system. Some caucuses mark candidates only as qualified or unqualified and that system has some merit. But this year I wouldn't have run without caucus endorsement."

Wallace Meyer

Teacher Power: "The final power of any district is vested in the school board. Teachers and administration are the two sources of information they have. But the board can't walk away from making a decision."

Changing boundaries: "This is reasonable. Algonquin had a problem but it's not as bad this year as last because of the new addition; North School has mainly a lunchroom problem right now. The administration has to be sure we have an equal balance in the schools. If not, a boundary change is a simple solution."

Board-teacher relations: "I've tried to talk to a few teachers and found a lot have dissatisfaction. But they don't all have the same dissatisfaction — it all kind of merges together into one big one. Communication is one source of strain. It seems we'll have to set up a more formalized system of communication with teachers — so that the teachers are able to give more honest opinions without their boss sitting over them."

Board-community relations: "I don't think the board has been very effective in getting out to the community. It takes a positive effort to keep the community informed. There should probably be a public relations system in the district."

Bus transportation: "We encourage our children to walk or ride a bike rather than take the school bus. I don't think the bus service is as it should be. And I don't think the board can walk away from being involved in bus service. School buses are a real problem and I'm sure Dist. 62 is glad they don't have to (by law) get directly involved in it."

Officials to review Lake Michigan water contract

by JERRY THOMAS

Elk Grove Village officials are weighing the merits of renewing their contract with the Tree Towns Water Commission to get water from Lake Michigan.

Village officials last week hired Greeley and Hansen, Chicago water consultants, to conduct a $22,000 study of the village's total water supply and distribution system and the proposed contract from Tree Towns.

The Tree Towns Water Commission, composed of Elmhurst, Villa Park and Lombard in Du Page County, completed an engineering study in 1972 for pumping water from Lake Michigan to the Northwest suburbs.

THE PLAN COULD supply nearly two billion gallons of water a year to Elk Grove Village.

In 1972 the state authorized allocations of Lake Michigan water to Elk Grove Village and other communities through the Tree Towns Commission.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District contested the state allocations and a Lake County Circuit Court judge ordered the state to hold new hearings on the allocations.

Greeley and Hansen will represent the Village of Elk Grove in the hearings in an attempt to protect the village's 2 billion gallon-a-year allocation and get it increased if possible.

JAMES CLEMENTI, Elk Grove Water Department chief, said the village could start using lake water by 1975, but is not now facing a water shortage.

"Our nine deep wells and over 9 million gallons of reservoir provide us with all the water we need and then some," said Clementi.

Clementi added that the water level in the Galesburg strata Elk Grove wells tap is dropping, but not as drastically as several years ago.

"Eventually we will have to look to Lake Michigan for water, but we need not be in any hurry," said Clementi.

Clementi said the $22,000 Greeley study will suggest future well sites and could also pinpoint location of the large reservoir needed if Elk Grove Village were to bring Lake Michigan water to the village.

THREE OF THE village's wells pump water directly into the distribution system and have no reservoir. Well No. 9, located in the industrial park, is a total gas energy powered station. Pumps, controls and water reservoir pumps are all powered by natural gas. Other wells are powered with electricity and have auxiliary gasoline-powered motors to power booster pumps to drain water from the reservoirs in case of power failure.

Village officials estimate it could cost $1.3 million for Lake Michigan water the first year the Tree Towns system is operational.

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, according to Village Mgr. Charles Willis, is in the enviable position of having several alternatives open for obtaining water.

It can buy water from Chicago, make provisions for piping its own allocation from Lake Michigan, or purchase water from various water commissions — not only the Tree Town Commission.

According to Clementi, the Greeley study will help the village decide what direction it intends to take.

"We have years to make the decision but don't want to let the time slip by and be faced with a water shortage," said Clementi.

Wellington Ave. recycling center to remain open

The Elk Grove Village glass and paper recycling center located in the municipal building parking lot on Wellington Avenue will remain open, village board members have decided.

Marie Bingham, conservation chairman of the Elk Grove Junior Woman's Club, said, "I'm well pleased with the board's decision to keep the center open and thankful of the residents' support and cooperation."

The center was threatened with closing several months ago and operated on a trial basis through the appeal of the women's club members.

The village was ready to close down the glass recycling because several loads of glass collected were rejected by recycling firms.

People were bringing in tons of glass but it was not stripped of metal contaminants and several loads were rejected as unsuitable for recycling.

THE VILLAGE lost about $400 every time a truckload of glass was turned down.

Assistant Village Mgr. Bob Franz said each glass recycling bin holds about 40,000 pounds and the village receives about a penny a pound for glass.

The board was reluctant to close the center and accepted the woman's club's offer to conduct an information campaign.

Club members worked with residents, bringing in glass on the Saturday collection days and explained why glass had to be sorted and clean.

Bottles must be clean, free of foil labels and separated by color. All metal rings or caps must be removed.

The recycling center, which also accepts paper, is open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays only. Residents are asked not to bring in paper or glass during the week.

THE CLUB, WHICH operates the center, said that when the center's operation was threatened many persons voiced concern and pledged to help.

"With everyone's help, the woman's club was able to convince the village board that residents of Elk Grove Village are concerned and want to use the recycling center," said Mrs. Bingham.

"Each home in the village could contribute 20 to 30 pounds of glass each month," said Mrs. Bingham.

They flew to their deaths...

They were flying too fast for conditions and came to an untimely end.

A flock of grackles — birds which look like a small blackbird with shiny blue heads — passed over Elk Grove Village Sunday night during the heavy winds and got tangled in the high tension wires along Tonne Road between Elk Grove Boulevard and Hartford Lane.

"The birds came in contact with high tension wires that run along the side of the road," said Elk Grove Village Animal Warden Don Jones. "All the injuries on their bodies indicated that they had flown into the wires."

Jones brought several of the more than 15 dead birds into a local veterinarian who examined them and determined how they died.

"That type of weather situation causes problems in navigating for the birds," said Jones. "We always have dead birds but rarely so many of them at one time."

Jones said when he was in the area yesterday he noticed a large number of grackles in that neighborhood. "I believe a flock went through Sunday," he said.

Drug education program at school

A program on drugs and drug education will be presented by the Cook County Education Service Region today, at 7:30 p.m. at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The program will feature representatives from the University of Illinois, the Chicago Board of Education and the Cook County Sheriff's Youth Service Department. Cook County School Supt. Richard J. Martwick will also participate in the program.

Topics of discussion will include "Drug Education in the Schools," "Community Impact on Drug Usage" and "Community Agencies."

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Murder suspect held without bond

A 56-year-old Elk Grove Township man was ordered held without bond Monday on charges that he shot to death a man who was seeing his daughter.

The suspect, Daniel Torres, 2845 Higgins Rd., appeared in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court before Associate Judge James Maher. He was charged with murder.

According to Cook County Sheriff's police, Torres shot and killed a Chicago man, Hector Cardona, 24, of 3039 Canal St., early Sunday.

Torres, who speaks little English, had to be questioned in court by Maher through an interpreter.

Lt. Howard Vanick, a sheriff's investigator, said the shooting occurred at the door of the Torres trailer in lot 16 of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park, 2845 E. Higgins Rd., when Cardona and another man came to see Torres' daughter.

ter, Felicita, 30. The woman was not home when the men showed up.

VANICK SAID Torres was upset that Cardona, who is married, was dating his daughter. When Cardona identified himself as the man who was dating the girl, Torres went and got his .25-caliber automatic pistol, and shot Cardona.

Torres reportedly turned the weapon over to Elk Grove Village police who were called to the scene minutes later and the man was taken into custody when sheriff's police arrived.

Cardona, employed as a laborer at Rockford Paper Mill in Des Plaines, was pronounced dead on arrival with gunshot wounds in the chest at Alexian Brothers Medical Center. Hospital spokesmen said the body was turned over to the county coroner's office.

Vanick said he knew of no past association between the two men and there was no argument before the shooting.

VANICK SAID neither Cardona's friend, nor another man inside the trailer with Torres, were injured by the shots. The suspect, an unemployed double amputee, offered police no resistance, according to accounts.

Torres was taken to county jail where he will be held until an April 16 hearing in Niles branch of circuit court.

THE GIFT OF LIFE

ELK GROVE VILLAGE COMMUNITY 4% BLOOD ASSURANCE PROGRAM

Annual Goal: 900 units
Already donated: 150
Still needed: 750

Fifteen units of blood were donated by Elk Grove Village residents last week to credit the village's 4 per cent blood replacement program.

Persons who wish to donate blood may do so now by contacting Alexian Brothers Medical Center at 437-5500 for an appointment for the April 11 hospital drive.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the blood program, said the next village draw is planned for Saturday. She may be contacted at the village hall at 439-3900 for further information.

Planners asked to look for consultant help

The Elk Grove Village Plan Commission has been asked by the village board to seek additional contract proposals from planners and traffic analysts interested in working for the village.

Plan Commission chairman Richard McGrenera said its members will meet with the village board to discuss the scope of studies.

McGrenera said the board last week put off hiring a professional village planner and a traffic analyst previously recommended by the village plan commission because it wants several from which to select.

The plan commission has suggested hiring Allen L. Kracower and Associates Inc. of Des Plaines, professional village planner for a $7,820 annual fee.

Also recommended was the hiring of Barton Aschman Associates Inc., traffic analysts. The firm submitted a contract calling for a $13,000 traffic study and update of the $18,000 1971 study it also prepared.

McGrenera said both village officials and plan commission members agree on the necessity of services of consultants.

"We do need, however, to discuss further just what kind of help we need and the trustees want to talk to us further about hiring consultants," said McGrenera.

"I don't find it unusual for them to ask us for several recommendations, so they can compare contracts or consultants' proposals," he added.

Rotarians seek to make club 'cross section of community'

Rotarians in Elk Grove Village are interested in making their membership a cross section of the community's interests and activities.

Anyone interested in further information may contact James G. Stevenson, president at 394-5050 or Larry Benedict at 439-8770.

According to Stevenson, Rotary is a world fellowship of business and professional men who accept the ideal of service as the basis for success and happiness in business and community life.

"Rotary is not a secret organization, nor does it seek to supplant or interfere with any religious or political organization," he said.

The club does not concern itself with a Rotarian's politics but expect a Rotarian to be faithful to his religion and loyal to his citizenship.

Rotarians in Elk Grove Village meet each Thursday for lunch at the Maitre D' Restaurant but their activities go far beyond their meetings.

They work as individuals and in committee on local projects in support of scouting, the Elk Grove Festival Chorus, and an exchange student and scholarship program.

The club currently is raising funds to donate a hospital room at Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

School principals get 10% pay increases

Central office administrators and principals for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 received salary increases averaging about 10 per cent.

Salary negotiations for Supt. Wayne Schaible have not been completed by the board.

Salaries for administrators, principals and assistant were approved on a 4-to-3 vote. Mrs. Brenda Pulla, Sherwood L. Spatz and Mrs. Arlene Czajkowski voted against the increases.

Spatz and Mrs. Pulla also voted against the increases for consultants and specialists. Mrs. Czajkowski abstained.

Mrs. Pulla voted against all the increases as a reflection on the system, she said. Her vote was not meant as a reflection against the individuals, she said, but because she could not justify the increases in her own mind.

CENTRAL OFFICE administrators' annual salaries approved are:

- Milton Derr, associate superintendent, from $25,000 to $28,000 yearly.
- Ronald Ruble, associate superintendent in charge of personnel and transportation from $23,500 to $26,000.
- James Briggs, associate superintendent in charge of special services, from $21,825 to $24,500.
- Carl Seltzer, curriculum director, from $20,500 to $22,000.

Other administrators' approved salaries are Jennie Swanson, early childhood education director, from $16,500 to $18,500; Marvin J. Lapicola, assistant superintendent in charge of finance, from $25,900 to $28,750; Joseph Vaso, superintendent of buildings and grounds, from $19,000 to $20,500, and Victor Berner, controller, from $17,500 to $19,000.

Principals, assistant principals, consultants and specialists also received additional medical and hospitalization insurance coverage. They will now receive full family coverage rather than the previous single person coverage.

Assistant principal positions also were

CUB SCOUT PACK 292 held its monthly pack meeting recently at Admiral Byrd School.

The rank of wolf was achieved by: Mike Kabeshita, David Peterson, Michael, Cox, Joe Messina and Fred Richter. Bill Nordberg is a new denner.

Kevin Laga was made bear, received a gold arrow and moves onto Webelos. Other arrow awards went to: Tom Frey, gold arrow; and Scott Gorman, silver arrow and two gold arrows.

The following Webelos received awards: Chris Cosgriff, aquanaut, artist, citizen, geologist, naturalist and traveler; Scott Mitchell, citizen and arrow of light; Eric Hanson, traveler; Vince Smiley, citizen, scholar, sportsman and traveler; Dean Coddington, aquanaut, and traveler.

First place in the pinewood derby was won by Scott Mitchell and second place winner was Greg Olson.

Fifth place in radio

Scott Scholten, a senior at Elk Grove High School, won fifth place for radio speaking in the state individual events speech tournament recently.

Scholten had placed second in district competition and third in sectional competition before advancing to the state. He has competed in radio speaking on the Elk Grove speech team for the past two years.

IT'S ENOUGH TO MAKE a kid turn circles with joy. Elk Grove Township Elementary School Dist. 59 is on the brink of Easter vacation when 10 full days can be devoted to play. School is out from Friday to April 22. After that it's just a few short weeks until school's end.

Upswing in racing profits seen

Arlington Park hopes for big year

by KURT BAUER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomer told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to rise and whose revenues continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomer told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.6 million between 1969 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomer reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinsey, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was boosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Another feature of Secretariat's appearance — an open infield at Arlington Park — may be repeated for some of the bigger weekend races this year, according to track spokesman Tom Rivera.

The grass area would be open to spectators anxious to combine picnicking or sunbathing with their race watching.

The Secretariat Handicap is one of five major races scheduled at Arlington this summer.

Purses of $100,000 added will be offered for the American Derby on Saturday, Aug. 24, and the Arlington Handicap on Saturday, Sept. 7.

The Arlington-Washington Futurity, set for Labor Day, is expected to gross $200,000 this year and will be the Midwest's richest horse race.

The Lassie, with an estimated purse of $100,000, will be held the Saturday of the Labor Day weekend.

SUMMER GASOLINE supplies also figure to play an important part in track officials' hopes for the upcoming season.

Earlier this year, Loomer identified gas shortages as the single biggest threat to race track attendance.

Even if gasoline is available, Rivera says he expects more fans will use the new, Arlington Park train depot.

A new electronic tote board has been installed at the track and a number of maintenance improvements are being made in the backstretch, in line with the recommendations of an administrative task force appointed last October by Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson.

Improvements include planting a number of trees in the stable area, the construction of some new comfort stations for track employees, and the painting of some barns and dormitories.

Concession prices for track patrons probably will not be increased, Rivera says, and the $1.50 general admission fee is unchanged.

"All in all, things look very, very bright," says Thayer.

Indeed it would seem that if Arlington Park is ever going to reestablish its claim to being one of the five top tracks in the country, 1974 must be the year.

Discipline committee studies new rules

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Thirty persons crowded into the High School Dist. 211 board room Friday for a meeting on a subject close to all of them — student discipline.

Parents, students, teachers, and board members were in the audience when Dist. 211's discipline committee held its first meeting to review discipline rules in the district's five high schools.

Several spoke out both for and against the present policy as the committee conducted a page-by-page discussion of the 24-page portion of the district policy manual. Tom Howard, associate principal at Schaumburg High School and chairman of the committee, encouraged the audience to ask questions and submit viewpoints in writing to the committee.

"It might take several months to resolve this so everyone can be heard," said Howard. Meetings have been scheduled for April 26 and May 3 at 3:30 p.m. in the Dist. 211 administration center, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

THE DISCIPLINE policy has been criticized in recent months because it allows for loss of class credit and possible expulsion of students for poor school attendance. This year it was revised so that the rules and the punishments are spelled out in the policy instead of leaving them to the discretion of the school administration.

Members of the five-man committee, one administrator from each school, were generally in favor of the present policy. "Students know where they stand and course grades have risen," said Dennis Douglas, associate principal at Fremd High School. "The vast majority of the staff like what's going on."

James Dewey, assistant principal at Conant High School, did not agree. "Attendance has not improved as far as I can tell," he said, and "the student, while he knows where he stands, still feels hassled."

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the committee agreed that if they did not punish students for poor attendance they would not be fair to students who come to class.

One of the teachers sitting in the audience agreed. "Most of my time should be given to students who are on time and who are conscientious. I'm not committed to spending my time on the student who is not playing the system," she said.

A parent, Antoinette Maione, Palatine, accused the district of "trying to achieve mass control" through its attendance policy. "I'm seriously concerned about the loss of individualization," she said.

FREED STUDENT Betsy Nelson said some students don't come to class because they are bored. "I wouldn't want their grades affected by that cut," she said. Students lose credit for classes they miss according to the present policy and even if tests and homework is made up the next day, the grade on that work is reduced one letter.

"If they choose to be truant then they choose to take the consequences," said Gerald Chapman, assistant principal at Hoffman Estates High School. Some students skip class because they aren't prepared for tests, he said.

"We're not a bunch of hard nosed S.O.B.'s. We want to do what's best for kids," said Glenn Hargrave, member of the board of education. "We've got to have some rules and regulations," he said. Giving students who break the rules special treatment "smacks of elitism," he said.

One of the more outspoken critics of the present discipline policy is board member Jean Fidler who submitted an eight-page report outlining her views.

"The academic record should reflect how well a pupil has learned the subject matter. It should not be affected by disciplinary sanctions," she said in her report. "The policies of lowering grades, giving zeros, not allowing make-ups are more likely to lead a pupil downward towards failure. It should be our task to think of ways of enabling pupils to have more successes," she says.

MRS. FISLER HAS asked the committee to devise a system of "behavior grades" which would measure how well a student complies with the rules of school discipline. These grades would be placed on a student's high school record separately from his grades in class. She also recommends more counseling and more special education classes for students who have been unable to adjust to high school discipline.

The committee has yet to discuss school rules on tardiness, suspension, expulsion, drugs and smoking. Howard said the committee will work its way through the entire policy and probably go back over it a second time.

Burglars hit two homes, garage

Burglars netted nearly $600 in goods and possessions during thefts at two Des Plaines homes and a garage, according to police.

Henry Senk told police someone forced his way into Senk's home at 1572 Webster Ln. Thursday and stole a color television set and cash. The burglary totaled $480, according to reports.

Burglars also made off with $95 in cash, food and liquor after entering the apartment of Maureen Merritt, 115 Dover Dr., police said.

The woman's son, Edward, told police he was returning home from school Thursday afternoon and noticed the place ransacked.

Taken were several bottles of liquor, undetermined amounts of food, a tape player along with $5 in cash.

Dolores Sullivan, 2688 Rusty Dr., told police thieves took a wheel cover worth $30 from her auto.

Track officials confident, optimistic

1974 may be year big profits return to Arlington Park

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomie told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to rise and whose revenues continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomie told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.6 million between 1969 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomie reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinsey, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was boosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race

named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Another feature of Secretariat's appearance — an open infield at Arlington Park — may be repeated for some of the bigger weekend races this year, according to track spokesman Tom Rivera.

The grass area would be open to spectators anxious to combine picnicking or sunbathing with their race watching.

The Secretariat Handicap is one of five major races scheduled at Arlington this summer.

Purses of $100,000 added will be offered for the American Derby on Saturday, Aug. 24, and the Arlington Handicap on Saturday, Sept. 7.

The Arlington-Washington Futurity, set for Labor Day, is expected to gross $200,000 this year and will be the Midwest's richest horse race.

The Lassie, with an estimated purse of $100,000, will be held the Saturday of the Labor Day weekend.

SUMMER GASOLINE supplies also figure to play an important part in track officials' hopes for the upcoming season.

Earlier this year, Loomie identified gas shortages as the single biggest threat to race track attendance.

Even if gasoline is available, Rivera says he expects more fans will use the new, Arlington Park train depot.

"All in all, things look very, very bright," says Thayer.

Indeed it would seem that if Arlington Park is ever going to reestablish its claim to being one of the five top tracks in the country, 1974 must be the year.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track is at a crossroads this summer. Plans for housing development of the 500-acre site will wait in the wings while track officials prepare for what they hope will be a successful racing season.

Homeowners hear costs, benefits of annexation

Annexation to the village of Palatine was discussed with homeowners of English Valley, Heatherlea and Pepper Tree subdivisions on Monday.

Approximately 75 residents from the three subdivisions in unincorporated Palatine Township north of the village limits discussed the pros and cons of annexation with Village President Wendell E. Jones and Trustee Richard W. Fonte.

A cost comparison sheet, presented to the homeowners, showed the village tax rate at $7.67 per $100 of equalized assessed valuation, compared to $6.73 in unincorporated Palatine Township. The main differences in taxes were in park district, village and rural fire department rates.

To offset the higher tax rate, the village showed cost benefits in vehicle taxes, refuse service, fire insurance, library fees, pool passes, commuter parking passes, and water and sewer rates.

Homeowners using all these services and living in unincorporated areas would realize a savings of more than $300 by annexing to the village.

THE ACTUAL SAVINGS to homeowners in the three subdivisions to be annexed to the village was computed at $213.40 for a house with an equalized assessed valuation of $12,720.

This savings included the difference in tax rates and cost of services.

Annexation to the village is contingent on the village's ability to purchase approximately 40 per cent of Ferndale Heights Utility Co. which now serves the three subdivisions.

JONES INFORMED the homeowners negotiations for the purchase of part of the utility company is now underway for an area bounded approximately by Smith Street on the west, Dundee Road on the north, and Rohlfing Road on the east.

The purchase, if approved, would be financed through revenue bonds. Jones said homeowners in the three subdivisions would pay higher water and sewer rates than current Palatine residents until the bonds were paid off.

Another concern of the homeowners was meeting the village's street lighting standards. Jones indicated financing and types of lighting would be negotiable at the time annexation agreements were worked out.

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Township officials' reports to highlight annual meeting

Reports from Palatine Township officials will head today's annual town meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. at Palatine Hills Junior High School, 1100 N. Smith St., unincorporated Palatine Township.

Major issues which will be discussed and put to a vote are resolutions on cemetery renovation in the township and mental health.

Short reports from each social agency which has received Palatine Township revenue sharing money in the past year will be presented, and discussion of state legislation affecting township spending powers for revenue sharing is scheduled.

Area townships are currently involved in a court test of a recent state attorney general's opinion which would severely limit township powers to spend revenue sharing money.

Parks to sponsor two field trips

Two special field trips will be sponsored by the Salt Creek Park District next week for youngsters on spring vacation.

On Monday, a trip to the Adler Planetarium is scheduled at 12:15 p.m. for youngsters living in Palatine Township. Cost is $2 including transportation and admission to the planetarium exhibits and sky show, entitled Planetary Plo-neers.

On Thursday, a bus will leave at 12:15 p.m. from Rose Park to the spring and Easter Flower Show at the Lincoln Park Conservatory. Cost is $2 including transportation and a guided tour of the show. Only 15 persons may register.

For information or registration for the trips, contact the district by calling 259-6890.

A BASKETFUL of Easter eggs was the objective of hunt in the Hunting Ridge subdivision in Palatine. A visit from the Easter bunny was part of the affair.

Parks offer belly dancing, trampoline

The Salt Creek Park District is offering two new sessions in women's belly dancing and children's tumbling and trampoline instruction. Starting dates are Thursday, April 18 and Saturday, April 20, respectively.

Both beginning and intermediate belly dancing classes are available on Thursdays at the Rose Park fieldhouse. Cost for the eight-week session is $7 for residents and $9 for nonresidents.

Tumbling and trampoline lessons will be held for six weeks on Saturday mornings. Cost is $4.50 for residents and $6 for nonresidents.

The district will also offer scuba diving lessons beginning Thursday, April 18. Classes will be given from 6:30 to 10 p.m. at the Arlington Park Towers swimming pool. The eight-week session will cost $75, which will include water work and lecture instruction. Upon completion of the course, a certificate from the National Assn. of Skin Diving Schools will be awarded.

Auto accident injures 4 residents

Four Palatine residents suffered minor injuries in a chain-reaction auto accident on Roselle Road north of Algonquin Road in Palatine yesterday.

Details of the accident were incomplete late yesterday, but the four drivers involved were all taken to Northwest Community Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Those injured were Deborah J. Rossi, 18, of 508 Cunningham Dr., unincorporated Palatine Township; Patricia L. Anderson, 25, of 409 S. Rose St., Palatine; Howard E. Weld, 22, of 1530 Reynolds Dr., Palatine; and William F. Kangas, 43, of 663 E. Carpenter Dr., Palatine.

Palatine police reports indicated that the first auto, driven by Miss Rossi, was hit from behind by three autos following her on Roselle Road.

The local scene

Volleyball team wins

The women's volleyball team at Buehler YMCA finished first in the B division of the Chicagoand YMCA Metropolitan Women's Volleyball Division at a recent play day hosted by Buehler.

Buehler's team competed against five other teams to win the B division in the playday. The women also won the B league.

Northwest Suburban YMCA in Des Plaines won the A division and finished first in the A league.

Easter egg hunt for kids 3 to 8

Palatine Township youth from three to eight years old are invited to attend the Salt Creek Park District Easter egg hunt Saturday.

The hunt will take place in each of the district's three parks. At Rose Park, 530 S. Williams St., Palatine, the hunt will begin at 11:30 a.m. At South Park, Euclid and Rohlfing Road, Rolling Meadows, the hunt will begin at 12:30 p.m. At Winston Park, Palatine Road and Joyce Street, Palatine, the hunt will begin at 1:30 p.m.

In case of rain, only the Rose Park hunt will be held at 11:30 a.m.

Special eggs will be hidden worth special prizes and the Easter Bunny also will appear.

Driver of car escapes injury

A motorist escaped injury Sunday when the car he was driving crashed through a guard fence on W. Frontage Road north of Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows.

The accident occurred when Stephen W. Grenning, 22, of 4738 Arbor Dr., Rolling Meadows, apparently lost control of his vehicle as he approached a banked curve heading northbound on W. Frontage Road.

Some 300 feet of fence bordering West Frontage and Ill. Rte. 53 was torn away and dragged onto the pavement in the crash.

Police said Grenning told them he was traveling at about 50 m.p.h. at the time. The posted speed limit on W. Frontage is 35 m.p.h.

Grenning was charged with reckless driving and damage to state property. He was released on $500 bond and is scheduled to appear in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on May 14.

Track officials confident, optimistic

1974 may be year big profits return to Arlington Park

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomie told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

Improvements include planting a number of trees in the stable area, the construction of some new comfort stations for track employees, and the painting of some barns and dormitories.

Concession prices for track patrons probably will not be increased, Rivera says, and the $1.50 general admission fee is unchanged.

"All in all, things look very, very bright," says Thayer.

Indeed it would seem that if Arlington Park is ever going to reestablish its claim to being one of the five top tracks in the country, 1974 must be the year.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track is at a crossroads this summer. Plans for housing development of the 500-acre site will wait in the wings while track officials prepare for what they hope will be a successful racing season.

Public hearing today on budget

A public hearing on the proposed 1974-75 Rolling Meadows city budget will be held tonight before the city council in city hall.

The budget package totals about $3,639,750, an increase of some $348,150 over the current fiscal budget.

Copies of the budget must be available for public examination today in time for the hearing, which will be held as part of the regular city council meeting.

Most budget categories reflect an increase in expected spending, with the public works department budget again expected to take the biggest chunk of available revenues.

A public works budget of about $1.5 million is expected. The police department is expected to require the next highest total, about $700,000. The fire department is expected to require about $400,000.

The preliminary budget has also requested a per cent cost-of-living increase for city employees. Elected officials were not allotted pay hikes in the preliminary budget.

Available revenues will come from property taxes, sales taxes, state income taxes, fees, licenses, matching funds from the federal and state government, federal revenue sharing and interests on investments.

THE PUBLIC hearing is required prior to passage of the budget. The budget must be passed by April 30 in time for the fiscal year which begins May 1.

The city council is also expected to hold a public hearing on a proposal by Roskamp Enterprises, Inc. to build a nursing home on 3.4 acres on the south side of Kirchoff Road west of Ill. Rte. 53.

The proposal, the second from the firm, was rejected by a special city zoning commission after residents living on the south side of Kirchoff Road next to the site and in the Plum Grove County-side and Winthrop Village subdivisions near the area objected to the plan.

The residents said the project would detract from their residential area and would increase flooding problems on their property.

THE FIRM tried unsuccessfully once before to build a nursing home on land directly opposite the present site. The plan was turned down by the city council when the same residents opposed the project.

More police, fire workers for city?

Manpower increases in both the police and fire department have been included in revised Rolling Meadows budget proposals released late Monday night.

The budget revisions call specifically for an additional six men to be added to the fire department and three additional patrolmen and one additional service officer to be added to the police department. The police department has also been authorized to add two additional sergeants and three new corporals to the department.

The additional sergeants would bring the department's sergeant total to five. The corporal's rank would be a new position.

The addition of six more firemen would bring to 24 the total number of full-time men in the city fire department. Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty had asked for as many as 21 additional men in a preliminary budget request, but that total would have more than doubled the size of the department.

AN ADDITIONAL lieutenant's rank also has been included in the revised tentative figures for the fire department. The department currently has three lieutenants.

If the additions in the police department are granted by the city council, it would bring the department's manpower to 31 certified officers, one chief and three service officers. Total patrolman strength would be reduced from 24 to 21, but the additional officers' ranks would increase the department size.

City Mgr. James Watson said Monday night the corporal's rank would be an appointive position rather than a civil service ranking. Police Chief Lewis R. Case would be authorized to make the corporal's appointments.

THREE NEW men have also been

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Ströther, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Discipline committee studies new rules

by KATHERINE BOYCE
Thirty persons crowded into the High School Dist. 211 board room Friday for a meeting on a subject close to all of them — student discipline.
Parents, students, teachers, and board members were in the audience when Dist. 211's discipline committee held its first meeting to review discipline rules in the district's five high schools.
Several spoke out both for and against the present policy as the committee conducted a page-by-page discussion of the 24-page portion of the district policy manual. Tom Howard, associate principal at Schaumburg High School and chairman of the committee, encouraged the audience to ask questions and submit viewpoints in writing to the committee.
"It might take several months to resolve this so everyone can be heard," said Howard. Meetings have been scheduled for April 28 and May 3 at 3:30 p.m. in the Dist. 211 administration center, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.
THE DISCIPLINE policy has been criticized in recent months because it allows for loss of class credit and possible expulsion of students for poor school attendance. This year it was revised so that the rules and the punishments are spelled out in the policy instead of leaving them to the discretion of the school administration.

Members of the five-man committee, one administrator from each school, were generally in favor of the present policy. "Students know where they stand and course grades have risen," said Dennis Douglas, associate principal at Fremd High School. "The vast majority of the staff like what's going on."
James Dewey, assistant principal at Conant High School, did not agree. "Attendance has not improved as far as I can tell," he said, and "the student, while he knows where he stands, still feels hassled."
SEVERAL MEMBERS of the committee agreed that if they did not punish students for poor attendance they would not be fair to students who come to class.
One of the teachers sitting in the audience agreed. "Most of my time should be given to students who are on time and who are conscientious. I'm not committed to spending my time on the student who is not playing the system," she said.
A parent, Antoinette Maione, Palatine, accused the district of "trying to achieve mass control" through its attendance policy. "I'm seriously concerned about the loss of individualization," she said.

FREM D STUDENT Betsy Nelson said some students don't come to class because they are bored. "I wouldn't want their grades affected by that cut," she said. Students lose credit for classes they miss according to the present policy and even if tests and homework is made up the next day, the grade on that work is reduced one letter.
"If they choose to be truant then they choose to take the consequences," said Gerald Chapman, assistant principal at Hoffman Estates High School. Some students skip class because they aren't prepared for tests, he said.
"We're not a bunch of hard nosed S.O.B.'s. We want to do what's best for kids," said Glenn Hargrave, member of the board of education. "We've got to have some rules and regulations," he said. Giving students who break the rules special treatment "smacks of elitism," he said.
One of the more outspoken critics of the present discipline policy is board member Jean Fisler who submitted an eight-page report outlining her views.
"The academic record should reflect how well a pupil has learned the subject matter. It should not be affected by disciplinary sanctions," she said in her report. "The policies of lowering grades, giving zeros, not allowing make-ups are more likely to lead a pupil downward towards failure. It should be our task to think of ways of enabling pupils to have more successes," she says.
MRS. FISLER HAS asked the committee to devise a system of "behavior grades" which would measure how well a student complies with the rules of school discipline. These grades would be placed on a student's high school record separately from his grades in class. She also recommends more counseling and more special education classes for students who have been unable to adjust to high school discipline.
The committee has yet to discuss school rules on tardiness, suspension, expulsion, drugs and smoking. Howard said the committee will work its way through the entire policy and probably go back over it a second time.

A BASKETFUL of Easter eggs was the objective of hunt in the Hunting Ridge subdivision in Palatine. A visit youngsters who took part Saturday in an Easter egg from the Easter bunny was part of the affair.

Township officials' reports to highlight annual meeting

Reports from Palatine Township officials will head today's annual town meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. at Palatine Hills Junior High School, 1160 N. Smith St., unincorporated Palatine Township.
Major issues which will be discussed and put to a vote are resolutions on cemetery renovation in the township and mental health.
Short reports from each social agency which has received Palatine Township revenue sharing money in the past year will be presented, and discussion of state legislation affecting township spending powers for revenue sharing is scheduled.

Area townships are currently involved in a court test of a recent state attorney general's opinion which would severely limit township powers to spend revenue sharing money.

More police, fire workers for city?

slated for hiring in the public works department and a new position of environmental inspector has been recommended for addition to the health department budget.
Salary increases of 8 per cent have been recommended for all city employees.
The revised figures presented Monday night also indicate the city may collect up to $4,074,750 in revenues, an increase of more than $800,000 from the present $3,273,600 total. The increase is substantially higher than city officials had originally predicted when the preliminary budget was first presented in late February.
The added revenues would derive from an expected increase in the city's assessed valuation from $82 million to some $100 million predicted for the coming fiscal year.
The proposed $4 million budget would be the largest city budget ever proposed.
The budget is scheduled to be considered tonight in a public hearing before the city council. Final approval of the package will rest with the council, which has the power to cut or increase any budget category. Passage of the package is expected at the April 23 council meeting.

Driver of car escapes injury

A motorist escaped injury Sunday when the car he was driving crashed through a guard fence on W. Frontage Road north of Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows.
The accident occurred when Stephen W. Grenning, 22, of 4736 Arbor Dr., Rolling Meadows, apparently lost control of his vehicle as he approached a banked curve heading northbound on W. Frontage Road.
Some 300 feet of fence bordering West Frontage and Ill. Rte. 53 was torn away and dragged onto the pavement in the crash.
Police said Grenning told them he was traveling at about 50 m.p.h. at the time. The posted speed limit on W. Frontage is 35 m.p.h.
Grenning was charged with reckless driving and damage to state property. He was released on $500 bond and is scheduled to appear in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on May 14.

Easter egg hunt for kids 3 to 8

Palatine Township youth from three to eight years old are invited to attend the Salt Creek Park District Easter egg hunt Saturday.
The hunt will take place in each of the district's three parks. At Rose Park, 530 S. Williams St., Palatine, the hunt will begin at 11:30 a.m. At South Park, Euclid and Rohlfing Road, Rolling Meadows, the hunt will begin at 12:30 p.m. At Winston Park, Palatine Road and Joyce Street, Palatine, the hunt will begin at 1:30 p.m.
In case of rain, only the Rose Park hunt will be held at 11:30 a.m.
Special eggs will be hidden worth special prizes and the Easter Bunny also will appear.

Parks to sponsor two field trips

Two special field trips will be sponsored by the Salt Creek Park District next week for youngsters on spring vacation.
On Monday, a trip to the Adler Planetarium is scheduled at 12:15 p.m. for youngsters living in Palatine Township. Cost is $2 including transportation and admission to the planetarium exhibits and sky show, entitled Planetary Pioneers.
On Thursday, a bus will leave at 12:15 p.m. from Rose Park to the spring and Easter Flower Show at the Lincoln Park Conservatory. Cost is $2 including transportation and a guided tour of the show. Only 15 persons may register.
For information or registration for the trips, contact the district by calling 259-6890.

Greetings at Easter time

...a Day for Prayer and Rejoicing

And a day for families to join together in the remembrance of that miraculous morn. A day for all to renew their faith and brotherhood and love. Once again, the wonder and awe of Easter will be celebrated in joyful song and heartfelt prayer. Once again, there will be a glow of happiness within us as the world celebrates the most joyful time of the year — this season of deep and gratifying spiritual warmth. We wish all of you the blessings of Easter. As each of us seeks inner peace, we hope that gladness and glory will be in the hearts of every family — in the hearts of the family of mankind.

Two Democrats pledge to build a power bloc

by PAT GERLACH

John J. Carsello has captured a leadership post in the Regular Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township even though he failed to win election to the office of committeeman.

In a joint statement Monday by Democratic Committeeman John F. Morrissey and Carsello, it was announced the two "have joined hands to build Democratic power" in the township.

In the March 19 election, Morrissey won a second term, as committeeman, defeating Carsello, his challenger, by 168 votes.

MORRISSEY SAID he has invited Carsello to assist him in leading the party and predicts the combined leadership "will work towards the largest Democratic vote in the history of Schaumburg Township in November," pointing out that more than 3,600 Democratic ballots were cast in the March primary.

"Carsello is a talented man; he has energy and drive and certainly ran a good effective campaign against me," Morrissey said. "No specific title has been chosen for Carsello, but I am sure he will be helping me carry our organization to great success," Morrissey added.

Establishment of a permanent party headquarters at 638 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, was announced by both men Monday.

They said 24-hour telephone service has been started at 894-3200.

ORGANIZATION plans, being implemented immediately, call for a Blue Ribbon executive committee, which "will represent every area in the township."

In line with Carsello's plans for the organization, outlined during his campaign, four key committees are being organized to handle membership, finance publicity and social functions and a quarterly newsletter, The Democrat, will be mailed to all registered party members in the township.

Other Carsello plans call for a general membership meeting "where leaders will report to party members" and a caucus "where every registered Democrat will have a voice in selecting Schaumburg candidates."

Both Morrissey and Carsello promise "No Republican candidate running under a national party label will ever again win his seat by default" in the township.

"I am certainly going to do all I can to bring this to a head and carry through," said Carsello.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT was applauded by Bill Holmes, an unsuccessful write-in candidate for the committeeman's post. "Good, I think it's about time the citizens had some service from the organization but I hope it's not just a lot of talk," Holmes said.

Holmes said he has not yet had an opportunity to begin organizing an independent Democratic organization which he announced plans for following his defeat. Holmes was successfully challenged off the ballot by Morrissey because his nominating petitions contained more than the maximum limit of signatures.

The next meeting of the Democratic organization will be held at 7:30 p.m. April 30 in the Ground Round Restaurant, Roselle and Higgins roads. Future meetings, however, will be held in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates on a rotating basis.

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

School principals get 10% pay increases

Central office administrators and principals for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 received salary increases averaging about 10 per cent.

Salary negotiations for Supt. Wayne Schabbe have not been completed by the board.

Salaries for administrators, principals and assistant were approved on a 4-to-3 vote. Mrs. Brenda Pulla, Sherwood L. Spatz and Mrs. Arlene Czajkowski voted against the increases.

Spatz and Mrs. Pulla also voted against the increases for consultants and specialists. Mrs. Czajkowski abstained.

Mrs. Pulla voted against all the increases as a reflection on the system, she said. Her vote was not meant as a reflection against the individuals, she said, but because she could not justify the increases in her own mind.

CENTRAL OFFICE administrators' annual salaries approved are:

- Milton Derr, associate superintendent, from $25,000 to $28,000 yearly.
- Ronald Ruble, associate superintendent in charge of personnel and transportation from $23,500 to $26,000.
- James Briggs, associate superintendent in charge of special services, from $21,825 to $24,500.

• Carl Seltzer, curriculum director, from $20,500 to $22,000.

Other administrators' approved salaries are Jennie Swanson, early childhood education director, from $16,500 to $18,500; Marvin J. Lopicola, assistant superintendent in charge of finance, from $23,900 to $26,750; Joseph Viso, superintendent of buildings and grounds, from $19,000 to $20,500, and Victor Berner, controller, from $17,500 to $19,000.

Principals, assistant principals, consultants and specialists also received additional medical and hospitalization insurance coverage. They will now receive full family coverage rather than the previous single person coverage.

Assistant principal positions also were changed to a 12-month position and placed on the administrators' salary evaluation rather than the teachers' salary schedule.

Consultants received the following annual salaries: Archie Wilson, art consultant, from $17,500 to $18,960; Joseph Cech, math consultant, from $18,250 to $19,760; Gregory Gorski, music consultant, from $19,500 to $21,000; Leonard Sirotzki, social studies consultant, from $17,775 to $19,500; Larry Small, science consultant, from $17,775 to $19,260.

OTHER CONSULTANTS' approved salaries are: Jo Telford, reading consultant, from $17,000 to $18,260; James Johnson, environmental education, from $14,500 to $16,160; and Ellie Thorsen, language arts specialist, from $13,500 to $14,760.

School psychologists' salaries for next year are: R. Charles Hanlon, $18,850; Diane Bowyer, $16,375; Stephen Uhl, $16,400; Katherine Rabinovitz, $14,100; Robert Olson, $15,030, and Carl Roach, $15,400.

The base and maximum pay for maintenance and custodial staff were raised about $500.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Peskin bribe case sentencing May 21

by NANCY COWGER

Bernard M. Peskin, convicted Thursday of bribing former Hoffman Estates officials, will be sentenced at 10 a.m. May 21 by U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr.

Peskin faces a maximum penalty of 33 years in a federal prison and $65,000 in fines. Assistant U.S. Atty. Anton Valukas has declined to say whether he will recommend the maximum, but it is considered unlikely since this is Peskin's first criminal conviction and because Judge McGarr has indicated he will consider Peskin's health in passing sentence.

Peskin has undergone colostomy surgery, and Judge McGarr ordered a presentencing report on Peskin's condition.

Judge McGarr also permitted Peskin's defense attorney, Thomas P. Sullivan, 15 days in which to file post-trial motions contesting either the conduct of the trial or imposing sentence. Prosecutors will be given 15 days to respond to Sullivan's motions.

SULLIVAN IS expected to appeal Peskin's conviction on five counts of bribery, one of conspiracy and one of income tax evasion, basing his appeal on Judge McGarr's instruction to the jury at the close of the trial.

Judge McGarr told jurors it was im-material whether Peskin knew all acts that were taken to further the bribery conspiracy scheme. If the jurors found Peskin guilty of participating in a conspiracy, and found that specific acts by any other members of the conspiracy expedited completion of the bribery scheme, they must also have found Peskin guilty of perpetrating the specific acts, Judge McGarr told them.

Park commissioners meet tonight

The Hoffman Estates Park Board of Commissioners will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. today to discuss a development plan for Sycamore Park, the closing of Hillcrest fields and possible dismissal of a contractor.

After the meeting, the finance committee will meet to put together a tentative budget. The meetings will be conducted at the Village Administration Center, 650 W. Higgins Rd.

Commissioners will consider a Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. plan to provide better drainage and better athletic fields at Sycamore Park.

The board was told several weeks ago

Township budget hearing tonight

The Schaumburg Township annual budget hearing and meeting will be held tonight at the Schaumburg Township Public Library. The hearing will begin at 8 p.m. with the meeting scheduled at 8:30.

The proposed 1974-75 budget for the town fund is $184,720. Last year's budget was $140,776. The increase will help fund two additional youth workers for the outreach program and pay for the increased costs of running elections in the township.

The general assistance budget proposes an increase from $45,000 to $75,000. The library fund will be increased from $450,000 to $565,000. The tax rates for the library fund will remain the same. The increase comes from increased valuation in the area, said Vern Laubenstein, supervisor.

Is Chino Park issue done with?

Hoffman Estates Park Board agendas seemed strangely bare last week. "Chino Park" an item carried under "old business" on the agenda of every meeting for more than two years, has now been dropped.

Perhaps this can be interpreted as the park district writing off village-owned Chino Park at last.

A REPRESENTATIVE of Mor-Well Builders denied rumors last week concerning the sale of the company's undeveloped Schaumburg property to Sheandoah Construction Co.

"We haven't done anything. Nothing is concrete," said Mor-Well's Wolf Shipman. But Shipman complained that often the general public knows more about what's happening than those involved.

"You want to know something? Go out to the street where everybody knows everything — where everybody is an expert. Like the stories about Kuwait buying Hoffman Estates everybody was talking about the other day," said Shipman.

CHRIS AND CECILY, daughters of Mayor Robert O. Atcher, will be featured performers at the April 20 Kane's Casino Kabaret presented by St. Hubert's Church West.

The event is being planned as a departure from the usual Las Vegas night affair and two shows will be offered which include a total of five acts and, according to a spokesman, "a very wow" chorus line.

BIRTHDAY greetings are in order for Tom Downey, of Hoffman Estates, who celebrated reaching 16 last Sunday.

"TROUBLE IS only opportunity in work clothes," says Phil Ossifer.

The local scene

VIP election today

Schaumburg Very Interested Parents (VIP) will hold their annual election of officers today at 8 p.m. in Room 246 at Schaumburg High School, 1100 W. Schaumburg Rd.

Kay Koehler, Schaumburg High School girls sports coordinator, will discuss the current controversy over girls and boys competing together in sports and outline the new sports program for girls being implemented at the school.

Parents of all Schaumburg High School students are invited to attend the VIP meeting whether or not they are paid members of the group.

Jaycee Carnival

Planning for Schaumburg's annual Jaycees Carnival is now in high gear.

The annual event is scheduled for June 20-23 at Town Square Shopping Center, Jaycee Bob Perazzo told the village board this week.

Perazzo said Cubs baseball personalities Carmen Fanzone, Rick Monday and others are scheduled to make appearances at the carnival.

Trustees agreed to the issuance of temporary liquor, business and food licenses for the event and waived fees for the certificates.

Perazzo emphasized that all funds collected by the Jaycees are channeled back into community projects and activities.

Softball meetings begin

Organizational meetings for softball leagues sponsored by the Hoffman Estates Park District will be held beginning Wednesday at the Vogeley Administration Center, 650 W. Higgins Rd.

Men wishing to join the 12-inch softball league are urged to attend at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, and those interested in 16-inch softball play will meet at 8:30 p.m. the same day.

The organizational meeting for women's softball will be at 7:30 p.m. April 17 and the high school boys' 16-inch softball league meeting will be at 10 a.m. April 20.

Fees will be discussed. For more information call the park district at 885-7500.

Hoffman Estates puts information line in service

If you call the Hoffman Estates Village Hall after hours and get a recording, don't hang up. You might get some important information.

A public information line designed to take telephone calls after business hours is now in service at the municipal building. It can provide the caller with pre-recorded messages like dates for voter registration or reminders about vehicle sticker deadlines.

Up-to-date information about emergencies such as power failures or water line breaks can be provided by the device. Messages can be left with the machine so that the proper village personnel can respond the next day.

Trustee Diane Jensen said some residents did not understand the purpose of the information line. "This machine was never intended to replace a human being," she said. "And we realize that some people may get impatient when they call the village hall after business hours and get a recording."

"Before, however, all the caller got was a no answer. This way we can take messages and also offer timely information, particularly during emergency situations. We are trying to provide better communications between the village and the residents, especially after office hours. I think that once people get used to the information line, they will appreciate having it."

Discipline committee studies new rules

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Thirty persons crowded into the High School Dist. 211 board room Friday for a meeting on a subject close to all of them — student discipline.

Parents, students, teachers, and board members were in the audience when Dist. 211's discipline committee held its first meeting to review discipline rules in the district's five high schools.

Several spoke out both for and against the present policy as the committee conducted a page-by-page discussion of the 24-page portion of the district policy manual. Tom Howard, associate principal at Schaumburg High School and chairman of the committee, encouraged the audience to ask questions and submit viewpoints in writing to the committee.

"It might take several months to resolve this so everyone can be heard," said Howard. Meetings have been scheduled for April 26 and May 3 at 3:30 p.m. in the Dist. 211 administration center, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

THE DISCIPLINE policy has been criticized in recent months because it allows for loss of class credit and possible expulsion of students for poor school attendance. This year it was revised so that the rules and the punishments are spelled out in the policy instead of leaving them to the discretion of the school administration.

Members of the five-man committee, one administrator from each school, were generally in favor of the present policy. "Students know where they stand and course grades have risen," said Dennis Douglas, associate principal at Fremd High School. "The vast majority of the staff like what's going on."

James Dewey, assistant principal at Conant High School, did not agree. "Attendance has not improved as far as I can tell," he said, and "the student, while he knows where he stands, still feels hassled."

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the committee agreed that if they did not punish students for poor attendance they would not be fair to students who come to class.

One of the teachers sitting in the audience agreed. "Most of my time should be given to students who are on time and who are conscientious. I'm not committed to spending my time on the student who is not playing the system," she said.

A parent, Antoinette Maione, Palatine, accused the district of "trying to achieve mass control" through its attendance policy. "I'm seriously concerned about the loss of individualization," she said.

FREED STUDENT Betsy Nelson said some students don't come to class because they are bored. "I wouldn't want their grades affected by that cut," she said. Students lose credit for classes they miss according to the present policy and even if tests and homework is made up the next day, the grade on that work is reduced one letter.

"If they choose to be truant then they choose to take the consequences," said Gerald Chapman, assistant principal at Hoffman Estates High School. Some students skip class because they aren't prepared for tests, he said.

"We're not a bunch of hard nosed S.O.B.'s. We want to do what's best for kids," said Glenn Hargrave, member of the board of education. "We've got to have some rules and regulations," he said. Giving students who break the rules special treatment "smacks of elitism," he said.

One of the more outspoken critics of the present discipline policy is board member Jean Fiesler who submitted an eight-page report outlining her views.

"The academic record should reflect how well a pupil has learned the subject matter. It should not be affected by disciplinary sanctions," she said in her report. "The policies of lowering grades, giving zeros, not allowing make-ups are more likely to lead a pupil downward towards failure. It should be our task to think of ways of enabling pupils to have more successes," she says.

MRS. FISLER HAS asked the committee to devise a system of "behavior grades" which would measure how well a student complies with the rules of school discipline. These grades would be placed on a student's high school record separately from his grades in class. She also recommends more counseling and more special education classes for students who have been unable to adjust to high school discipline.

The committee has yet to discuss school rules on tardiness, suspension, expulsion, drugs and smoking. Howard said the committee will work its way through the entire policy and probably go back over it a second time.

Cub Pack 397 meets

Churchill School Cub Pack 397 held a "communication" pack meeting recently. Each den did an act on some form of communication.

Bear badges were awarded to Steve Charvat, Dave Helwig, Joe Livingston and Steve Menes. Menes also received a Gold and Silver Arrow.

Webelos pins were given to: Susheel Arya, artist, athlete, aquanaut, geologist and scientist; Tom Gongola, artist, athlete, naturalist, outdoorsman, scholar, sportsman and traveler; John Jacobs, sportsman; and Dan Pinson, traveler.

Mike Baker, Tim Blume, John Jacobs, Brian Johnson and Dan Pinson also received the Arrow of Light Badge during a candle-lighting ceremony.

PTA notes

Campanelli School PTA will meet tonight at 8 in the school gymnasium, 310 S. Springstuth Rd., Schaumburg. Officers for next year will be elected and a family night-art show is planned.

Mrs. Donald Moranos of 202 Lexington, Hoffman Estates, was elected president of the Hunting Ridge School PTA for next year.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. Daniel Pelletiere, first vice president, 1132 Skylark, Palatine; John Casey, second vice president, 1110 Skylark, Palatine; Mrs. Patrick King, recording secretary, 1072 Skylark, Palatine; Mrs. Robert Calahan, corresponding secretary, 1051 Bishop, Palatine, and Mrs. Jerry Edwards, treasurer, 339 Suffolk, Hoffman Estates.

Greetings at Eastertime

...a Day for Prayer and Rejoicing

And a day for families to join together in the remembrance of that miraculous morn. A day for all to renew their faith and brotherhood and love. Once again, the wonder and awe of Easter will be celebrated in joyful song and heartfelt prayer. Once again, there will be a glow of happiness within us as the world celebrates the most joyful time of the year — this season of deep and gratifying spiritual warmth. We wish all of you the blessings of Easter. As each of us seeks inner peace, we hope that gladness and glory will be in the hearts of every family — in the hearts of the family of mankind.

"A growing Bank, serving a growing community."

Five candidates take aim on two seats in race for Dist. 54 board

Adam J. Jelen Jr.: He has a 'genuine interest in kids'

Years ago Adam Jelen Jr. made a mental self-survey and decided he could be effective on the board of education because of his "real genuine interest in kids."

Jelen said he maintains this concern as he seeks reelection to Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education. What happens to youngsters is more important to him than any geographic or provincial interest, he said. "I feel I represent Schaumburg Township and the kids are the most important product... that's why we're here," he said.

Considering the area's transient population, he said he thinks "we have one of the finest districts in Illinois" that is used as a model for others to follow.

He also noted that the curriculum

directors for High School Dist. 211 and Dist. 54 maintain close articulation, particularly in the areas of language and industrial arts.

BECAUSE OF this communication, Jelen does not see many advantages to the unit district. He also questioned the maximum size of a unit district, pointing out the Rockford school district that once unified but due to size has separated again.

"If you can show me sound educational reasons for a unit district, I'll go along, but not otherwise," he said.

To handle Dist. 54 growth, Jelen said the board should talk with the villages about builders' donations but then set "our own guidelines based on impact." These guidelines should not be a negotiated item, he said. "To negotiate and come up with less is not doing a service to the community, and by community, I mean Schaumburg Township."

Jelen said he considers special education as the district's strongest area. Other strong points he noted were the district's finances and accounting and the board's complete openness to the public.

However, a split board and the relationship between the board and central office administration upsets him.

"WITH A SPLIT board it is difficult for the administrators to know the true wants of the board," he said. This has led to a "flip-flop" administration policy and has created morale problems, he said.

Jelen said he "thinks more of the education of children" rather than getting "hung-up over little problems like money." For example, he said the board split over the lunch program last summer was because half the board was "more concerned for money than what's best for kids."

Jelen, Spatz are incumbents

Jelen stated bus safety should be strengthened. He wants to require a minimum number of hours of training and mandatory yearly seminars for all bus drivers. He also favors padded seats and better visual arrangements for buses. Bus supervisors for kindergartners are necessary, he said, and perhaps should be extended to first and second grades.

Jelen said he thinks the Individually Guided Education program used here "is Schaumburg's own IGE" which uses a combination of team teaching and special help. "What it all boils down to is that we must help as many kids as possible in a way we can afford," he said.

TO HELP youngsters with drug problems, Jelen said "we must find out why a child is on drugs and then try to solve that problem in order to get anywhere." The drug problem is a community problem, he said, and everyone — the school districts, parents, social agencies and police — must work together with a positive approach, teaching values and self respect, he said.

Jelen and his wife, Cecilia, live at 329 Baxter Ln., Hoffman Estates, with their son, Michael. Jelen is a real estate salesman with Robert W. Starck and Co.

As a board member, he has helped produce an administrative evaluation procedure and as a member of the education committee has pushed an industrial arts complex.

He said he has been somewhat quiet on the board over the past three years, but intends to become a lot more vocal during the next three if reelected. "The more a board member says," he said, "tells people more about the school district."

Esther Karras:

I can listen to both sides of an issue

Esther Karras has demonstrated both her interest in education and her leadership abilities as president of the Schaumburg Area Council of PTA's for the past two years. She now wants to work where her "interests really lie" as a member of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Her particular asset, she said, is her ability to listen to both sides of an issue. She added, even though she may disagree with a majority decision, she can accept it, "shake hands" and continue with the business at hand.

A resident of Hoffman Estates for the past 10 years, Mrs. Karras said she has watched her four sons attend school as the district has grown from six to its current 24 schools. "I feel very good about the district as a whole," she said.

Mrs. Karras noted that the relationship between High School Dist. 211 and Dist. 54 has "improved a great deal" as the two districts have made an effort to coordinate some of their programs.

BECAUSE OF THIS improved relationship, she said she prefers the dual district system over a unit system. Dist. 54 is large enough to do its own volume purchasing, she said, and the size limits of a unit district would be prohibitive.

She pointed out the state recommends a unit district include only three high schools and a maximum of 20,000 students. With the current population growth, she said a fourth high school might be needed in the area and the student population will exceed the state recommendation.

"Probably the only advantage would be the teacher's salary," she said. "But I see no reason for a differentiation of salaries between the elementary and high school districts." First grade is just as hard to teach as the high school level, she said.

Mrs. Karras said the board has taken the first step in bus safety by having riders on kindergarten buses, but the board should continue to urge state legislation for more safety devices on school buses.

SHE ALSO COMMENTED the Individually Guided Education program has shown that students test higher in self esteem, but language arts and math scores were not significantly different after the first year of the three year pilot program. To warrant the extra expense of IGE, the program would have to prove educational benefits, she said.

Mrs. Karras and her husband, William, live at 308 Basswood. She said she has taken an active interest in the school board for the past six years, attending board meetings and being involved on various committees.

As a member of the community relations committee, she helped develop the community attitude survey questionnaire. She said it was from her suggestion to an administrator that the Nature Center was included on the recent referendum.

And she said her involvement with the PTA has given her the opportunity to become actively involved in the issues of the district. She noted the citizen seminars sponsored by the PTA to help inform parents about the curriculum and the PTA's involvement in the past referendum.

Margaret Pageler:

This former teacher hopes to contribute 'an educational approach to problem solving'

Interested in the educational process as an ex-teacher, parent and professor's wife, Margaret Pageler hopes to contribute "an educational approach to problem solving" to Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Using this approach, she is currently enrolled in a school business management course at Northern Illinois University and intends to study school law this summer.

Basically, she considers Dist. 54 to be a good district and does not intend "to grind any axes." However, she would like to see an administration growth plan comparable to the school growth plan implemented in the district.

For instance, she said she believes if a new position is going to be created, the total expense must be considered, rather than the board reacting to "pressure groups."

SHE IS IMPRESSED with the Hanover Highlands School Individually Guided Education (IGE) program because "it's flexible. It also offers a structured classroom for kids who can't cope with the open situation," she said.

She noted some schools, such as Muir, run into trouble because they don't offer an alternative. In addition, tion, she said there seems to be an impossible turnover of students, teachers and principals at Muir. She believes IGE needs a constant staff to work together and give the program consistency.

Philosophically, she is not opposed to a Schaumburg Township unit school district, especially in view of "the fragmentation of the township." She stated it might build more continuity into school programming. In addition, she believes there are seven people in the township who could make up a capable board to handle the district.

A particular concern of hers is that the school board is asked to make policies without getting all the data necessary. For example, she would like to see the building and sites committee look over contractors bids and cost overruns to determine which contractors hold to their original contract best.

SHE ALSO would like to include bus safety features within the bus contract. These would include padded dashboards, safety glass and padded seat backs.

The current special education program is "great" in her estimation. However, she doesn't want it provided at the expense of other necessary programs. For instance, she noted special programs for preschoolers are fine, but not at the expense of a full service kindergarten.

A resident of 269 Ida Rd., Hoffman Estates for 3½ years, Mrs. Pageler is the 34-year-old mother of four children. Her husband, John, is a professor at Harper College. She is a member of the school board's legislation and education committees and has been active with the building and site committee and the community relations committee.

She also is president of the Hillcrest School PTA and on the National Organization of Women Illinois Task Force on Education.

Vinette Smith:

She wants to get involved in the community and 'has this thing about good education'

With a certified public accountant's background, Vinette (Vicki) Smith said she considers herself a good candidate for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

"Plus I've got this thing about a good education," she said. Her parents had been involved in park boards and school boards when she was a youngster in Alma, Mich. Now she wants to get involved in her community, she said. And the way she feels she can benefit the community, she said, is by serving on the school board.

As a single woman, Miss Smith, 27, said she can offer a sense of integrity and independence. She has lived at 1611 Waxwing Ct., Schaumburg, for three years and works for Friedman, Eisenstein, Raemer and Schwartz in Chicago.

MISS SMITH SAID she is impressed with the interest demonstrated by the parents in the community. "To me this means a lot," she said. For instance, the excitement about the Nature Center was great, she said.

She stated the education in the district is good and the only complaint she has heard is the lack of facilities due to extreme growth in the district. "It's difficult for schools to keep up with classrooms," she said.

Because of the fast growth rate, she said she feels builders should contribute to the district since they are contributing so many additional children.

"From listening and observing, there should be some better long-range projections," she said. "Somewhere, somebody should have realized lots of new apartment complexes would come in here."

She noted the northeast

Schaumburg area served by Twinbrook School with its tremendous growth in the past three years as an example. When these complexes are in the building stages, she said the district should prepare so schools don't get as "jammed" as Twinbrook.

MISS SMITH suggested children be given an assigned spot to wait for buses to help prevent bus accidents. She also would like to have a study conducted to determine what is financially feasible in the area of bus safety as well as what must be done to improve it.

She said she prefers traditional classrooms that can accommodate the gifted child rather than the open classroom or Individually Guided Education. She noted a need for advanced studies to challenge the gifted student, but said teachers could assign a higher work level to these students instead of gearing an entire program toward them.

She added that "right at the moment I feel uninformed" about several issues. "But I'm eager to learn and feel I can be an unbiased, independent board member."

Sherwood Spatz:

He considers himself one of the most outspoken individuals on the school board

Regarding himself as "one of the most outspoken individuals on the board," Sherwood Spatz said there are some hard decisions ahead for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 that will require the type of knowledge he has gained as a school board member.

"Any first year board member will have a disadvantage," he said. Unified districts, bus policies and personnel evaluating methods are among the issues he said his experienced view could help.

Noting "we've got one helluva system" in Dist. 54, he pointed out that the district is not maintaining the status it has held in the past. In particular he said the intermediate program in language arts is suffering.

SPATZ ALSO SAID unit districting may hurt the district more than help. "It is good for smaller districts, but for us there's little advantage tax-wise," he said. At full growth, a unit district for Schaumburg Township could become "cumbersome," he added. And when it comes time to cut the budget, "it gets cut at the elementary school level," he said.

Spatz wants to "encourage cooperation" between the district and the villages about growth needs. He said special evaluations need to be made of the quadrads and high-rises that have been proposed since the area has not had any experience with these types of complexes.

At the present time, he said, administration is leading the school board, a situation he regards as "unfair." It puts undue burden on the administration by forcing them to make decisions that they have no legal right to bear, he said.

He said the board should give clear directives to the administration.

THE DISTRICT should use its "push and prestige" as the largest elementary school district to get better bus safety controls through the state legislature, he said. If the legislature demands safety controls, local transportation companies will be forced to comply, he said.

Spatz also noted the Individually Guided Education program has "kids loving to go to school." But "maybe we should be attractive in the traditional concept. The educational achievements in IGE are no better... no worse..." according to test scores, he said.

Spatz and his wife, Dolores, reside at 7875 Ramsgate, Hanover Park, with their three children. Spatz is the president and owner of Home Systems.

Among his past achievements as a board member, Spatz is responsible for the parent observer program and has pushed for development of the full session kindergarten program.

He has been chairman of the education committee and the building and sites committee while he has been on the board.

River Trails parks buy half Rob Roy driving range

The River Trails Park District has bought half of the Rob Roy Driving Range from Kenroy Inc. of Skokie for $750,000. The price tag matches the bond referendum amount passed by district voters in December, 1971.

The negotiated settlement was reached out of court and ends the pending park district condemnation suit on the property. The land purchased, however, is not the same as in the suit.

The park district originally wanted the front half of the 37.4-acre driving range, located on the north side of Euclid Avenue between Wheeling and Wolf roads. However, the purchase is of the east half.

"WE FEEL WE got a better deal," Park Director Marvin Weiss said. The district is getting drier and higher land and any Kenroy development will not be landlocked behind the park, he added.

THE PROPERTY switch was approved by both the court and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). A HUD grant of up to $300,892 has been approved and should be received shortly. The exact amount of the grant will be half of the purchase price and legal costs or the $300,892, whichever is the smaller.

The HUD money, plus approximately $60,000 in interest from the bond money, will be used for development on all the district's parks. Projects are beginning immediately, with the first being four tennis courts for Sycamore Trails Park, Kensington Road west of Wolf Road, and two tennis courts for Tamarack Trails Park, Kensington Road near the Park View Schools. The tennis courts should be ready by this summer, Weiss said.

Other developments planned are playground equipment, trees and a new maintenance garage. These projects will start later in the year, he said.

AS PART OF the agreement, the park district will allow Kenroy to tap on to the park district's 15-inch sewer for a $5,000 fee. The tap-on would come only if Kenroy develops its half of the driving range, however.

The $750,000 price was "extremely close to the appraisal price," Weiss said. Without giving the amount, he said the $750,000 bond issue was based on the appraisal.

In June, 1972, Kenroy and the park district had an agreement on a sale of the front half of the driving range for $600,000. That agreement fell through, however, when the Village of Mount Prospect refused to grant apartment zoning for the rear half of the driving range.

The Village of Mount Prospect will have to rustle up some $8 million if it hopes to buy the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The River Trails Park District has agreed to pay Kenroy Inc., Skokie, $750,000 for 18.77 acres of the driving range adjoining the golf course, which is east of Wheeling Road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The total breaks down to roughly $40,000 an acre. For the 200-acre golf course, that works out to $8 million.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert said Monday the $40,000-an-acre price tag "doesn't surprise me. I don't think it's out of whack from what we've been talking about."

ESTIMATES OF the market value of the golf course have ranged from $6 to $9 million, though one village trustee, Richard N. Hendricks, has insisted the price is inflated and should be considerably less.

Teichert said the $40,000-an-acre cost to the park district is "not unreasonable, but I hope we can do better."

He noted that the front part of the newly-acquired River Trails Park District property had been zoned for commercial use by Cook County, while the golf course is zoned for single family use. Commercial property traditionally demands a higher price than single family.

The village is awaiting completion of two appraisals of the course before holding a referendum on whether to buy it. Teichert has estimated purchase of Rob Roy could cost taxpayers $30 a year for 20 years, based on a $9 to $10 million purchase price.

The village is anxious to buy the course in order to block apartment development. Kenroy has proposed constructing 4,500 apartments and condominium units.

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down. Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clear ing.

"We want Euclid but we want the tree too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

Depot, parking, offices over tracks proposed

Plans to develop a depot, along with commuter parking and office space over the Chicago and North Western Railway tracks in downtown Mount Prospect are "very preliminary" and "at this point, unlikely" to be fulfilled, according to the agent representing the developer.

Herbert Jacobson, of Draper and Kramer Inc., Chicago, said Monday a developer has mentioned the possibility of developing a structure on the air rights, but quickly added that any plans are "very preliminary."

Asked how likely it is that the plans would reach fruition, Jacobson replied: "At this point, it's unlikely. We talk to millions of people about millions of things and most of it is unlikely."

The Herald revealed Monday that an as-yet undisclosed developer had contacted top village officials through Draper and Kramer about the feasibility of building a structure over the train tracks.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert said the concept of the arrangement "jibes very well with the rehabilitation of downtown. My feeling is that it's a very worthwhile pursuit."

The Herald learned through village sources that Draper and Kramer is handling the proposed project. While confirming some preliminary talk about the project, Jacobson declined further comment, saying it would be "premature" and "could very severely hurt our chances of doing this."

Village, library boards to meet

The village board will meet with the library board tonight to discuss possible sites in the central business district for a new library.

The meeting, in executive session, is the second session between the two groups. After the last meeting, March 25, Mayor Robert D. Teichert indicated several downtown library sites are being considered, including the abandoned Central School property and the current Mount Prospect State Bank building. Both also are being considered by the village for possible village administrative use.

Also in executive session tonight, the village board will continue its discussion of salary raises for village employees. Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppeley has suggested a 7 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, negotiations are continuing with the Combined Counties Police Assn., which is seeking a greater raise. Eppeley said after the last negotiating session last Thursday night that "we're meeting with a lot of progress," but added: "We still have a long way to go."

$1.4 million proposal up 8.1% over this year

'Tight' parks budget: no tax hike seen

A 1974-75 Mount Prospect Park District budget of $1,442,647, which park officials say will hold the line on taxes, has been drawn up by Thomas Cooper, director of parks and recreation.

The proposed budget represents an increase of 8.1 per cent over the present budget of $1,334,991. The new fiscal year begins May 1.

Park board president Robert Jackson last night described the document as "pretty tight," and predicted it would "hold the tax line where it is." In 1973, park district taxpayers paid $40.40 per $10,000 assessed valuation.

AMONG NEW items in the proposed budget:

- A recreation program at Friendship Park.

- Recreational facilities at Clearwater Park.

- A new entrance to the Kopp swimming pool at Dempster Junior High School.

- Play equipment at Devonshire Park.
- Remodeling of the Mount Prospect Country Club.
- Installation of walkways at Clearwater Park.

A new service to be available beginning June 1 will be reciprocal pool passes with the Arlington Heights and Des Plaines park districts. Residents with a valid season pass from one district will be able to use it at no additional charge in the other districts.

HERE'S A rundown on anticipated expenses in 1974-75: Administration, $58,350; park maintenance, $192,750; Kopp pool, $74,350; Lions Park pool, $27,850; Meadows Park pool, $26,950; golf facilities, $117,300; pro shop and concessions, $68,800; capital, $66,200; recreation, $269,900; bond and interest, $473,197; Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, $45,000; liability insurance fund, $20,000; and audit, $1,500.

Cooper was aided in devising the budget by Al Jackson, treasurer of the park board. Adoption of the budget is expected at the May 13 park district meeting.

The document is available for public inspection from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays at the administration office at the Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple St.

Three seek 2 board spots in Dist. 57

Edith Freund:

elementary district'*

Edith Freund admits one of the reasons she decided to seek reelection to the Dist. 57 School Board is so she can keep up free lance writing in her spare time.

"If I was not on the board, I'd probably go out and get a job and then I wouldn't have time to write."

Mrs. Freund, a mother of five, has some definite ideas about education and what the district should be doing for its students.

"Schools are one of the biggest bureaucracies in America and they need to have some of their strings clipped," Mrs. Freund contends. "Schools are all people — students, administrators and teachers — not numbers."

Mrs. Freund, a board member for three years, believes Dist. 57 is doing a good job of educating children. "We have a successful elementary district with programs that are middle or average in terms of forward looking education," Mrs. Freund said. "Other districts may do things differently than we do but I think a school district should reflect the community and ours does."

MRS. FREUND believes education is an ongoing process that should not be limited to the classroom. "A lot of school is just waiting time for kids to catch up with the system. Schools speed up learning and every child should have as much education as he can get."

"But parents should relax about their kids. Children will learn no matter what," Mrs. Freund said. "Schools should avoid custodial care and teach children to learn to make decisions, not have decisions provided to them. Schools are responsible for teaching children, not socializing them."

One of the biggest problems Dist. 57 will face within the next few years, according to Mrs. Freund, is declining enrollment.

Because the student population is tapering off, Mrs. Freund believes the district will be confronted with the problem of keeping a viable teaching staff while being forced to make cuts in that staff. The problem (continued on page 10)

Robert Novy:

People should challenge an educational system

"People should never be satisfied with an educational system. They should always be challenging it and trying to improve it," according to Robert Novy, incumbent Dist. 57 board member.

Novy, who has served on the board three years, the last two as board president, says he is seeking reelection because he is interested in maintaining a good educational system.

"The rewards of being a board member are personal and they far outweigh the expenditure of time involved," Novy said. "A board member starts to peak out after three years and I believe I have become a better board member and I would like to continue."

NOVY IS proud of some of the procedures instituted during the past two years under his leadership. "One of the goals I set was to reestablish the credibility of the board in the eyes of the community," Novy says.

Included in this credibility move, Novy said, was the establishment of long-range planning for the district by setting goals and objectives and letting the community know them. The board also established committees to deal with areas that in the past had been reviewed by the board as a whole, he said. Citizens groups were also established to help the board get information on specific problems.

The board also attempted to improve communications with district residents by holding meetings in different schools, the incumbent says. Although the venture did not prove successful in bringing out more people to board meetings, Novy said the move was not a failure. It is rather, he says, typical of the district.

Board briefs, a short newsletter summarizing board meetings, has probably been the most successful form of communicating with residents, Novy says.

"COMMUNITY feelings should not be locked out when the board has important decisions to consider," Novy (continued on page 10)

I testifies on incorporation; hearing recessed to May 21

One witness, a land surveyor, took the stand Monday as testimony began in the hearing to determine whether residents of unincorporated Prospect Heights will be allowed to vote to create a City of Prospect Heights.

Testimony by Robert Carlson of Wheeling, however, will be the only testimony heard until May 21. The hearing was continued to that date and not the previously agreed upon April 29 because of the unavailability of Jack Siegel, attorney for the objecting Village of Arlington Heights.

Carlson testified to the proposed municipality's boundaries. He also said the area of the proposed town would be under the four-square-mile limit. Carlson was a witness for the incorporation petitioners, the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn.

Six of the seven attorneys representing objectors cross examined Carlson. Their questions dealt with Carlson's qualifications as an "expert witness," the lack of a field survey on the proposed incorporation area and the inclusion of areas east of the Camp McDonald-Wolf roads intersection.

IN THE QUESTIONING, it was pointed out that a person could travel to Palwaukee Airport, which is partially included within the proposed boundaries, and stay within Prospect Heights, but a person could not drive from the airport to the west part of Prospect Heights without going through Wheeling. This is because Wheeling only annexed half the width of Wolf and Camp McDonald roads near their intersection.

Prior to the testimony, stipulations were entered into the record in which Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Northbrook acknowledged no land incorporated by them was the subject of any pending annexation within the proposed boundaries. Arlington Heights also made that stipulation but added that three lots, not now contiguous to Arlington Heights, are the subject of pre-annexation agreements to be consummated when they are contiguous. Two of the lots are on West McDonald Road and the third is on Waterman Avenue, south of Willow Road.

Arthur Vogelgesang:

*I'm giving the people
a choice in the election*

Although he admits to not making an all-out effort to capture a seat on the Dist. 57 School Board, Arthur Vogelgesang says he is running to give the voters a choice in the election.

Vogelgesang, a 10-year resident of Mount Prospect with three children, said he agreed to run when he was approached by members of the Dist. 57 Caucus. "I decided to run to do something to work with the community," he said. "I don't think it's fair to the people to have only two candidates, so I'm giving them a choice."

Vogelgesang, a management official with the V. S. Grinding Co. in Chicago, has no specific goals outlined for himself because he is not running against anything or anyone.

HE DOES HAVE some ideas, however, on what schools should be doing. "Districts spend a lot of money so they should do it with the aim of getting back their best return," Vogelgesang said. "Money should be spent on anything that would improve programs."

One of the reasons he moved to Mount Prospect from Chicago, Vogelgesang said, is the advantage of extra programs offered in the school curriculum.

"I like the curriculum and the extra things that are offered like band and language and the accelerated programs. I think the district should work to keep existing programs good and add new ones."

Vogelgesang feels grammar school should focus on teaching the basics and building on them. "Grammar school should give children the tools to prepare for secondary school. I think there's always room for change (continued on page 10)

Dist. 57

Edith Freund:

posted by tenured teachers must then be considered and the board will be faced with making placement decisions based more on tenure status than on course qualifications, Mrs. Freund said.

Mrs. Freund believes, however, that the relationship between the board and the administration and faculty has improved within the last year which has been a plus for the district.

REGARDING teacher negotiations, Mrs. Freund believes contract talks should be open to the public to "protect the district from one-sided information." Salaries should be kept in line with other districts but the most important consideration in determining pay scales should be factors relevant to Dist. 57 such as class size and finances, Mrs. Freund says.

She also believes teachers should not have the right to strike. "They want it both ways in being considered professionals and yet being in a union."

Describing the district's financial picture, Mrs. Freund says it is "holding." As the state keeps mandating new programs to be carried out, the district is in need of more money, Mrs. Freund said.

She is against aid to parochial schools because she contends that both the money and the children

Edith Freund:
Incumbent

could be used by the district because of declining enrollment.

Mrs. Freund says she believes citizen participation in district affairs is important. "I don't think we can have too much citizen involvement," Mrs. Freund says. "The board should be willing to recognize other people's points of view but the responsibility for decision making is with the elected board members."

Mrs. Freund points out, however, that the board's job is one of responsibility not wielding power.

Mrs. Freund also advocates the use of citizen advisory committees to help the board in fact-finding ventures. "If the board appoints a committee, it should be willing to take the committee's advice or else we're just toying with them."

2 incumbents, 2 newcomers seek Dist. 21 board posts

Jeremiah Crise: Expand science curriculum

Expanding the number and kinds of science offerings in Dist. 21 schools is one of the goals Arlington Heights incumbent Jeremiah Crise has in seeking a third three-year term on the school board.

Crise, 611 W. Hintz Rd., believes his six years of experience on the board makes him qualified for the position and he said he has a desire to continue to serve the community.

Crise said he also wants to continue his work with the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC). One of the founders of the cooperative, Crise is currently chairman of the building committee for the Samuel A. Kirk Center in Palatine.

BESIDES INCREASING science courses offered in the district, particularly in the areas of chemistry and physics, Crise said he favors exposing children to as many occupations as possible. He feels the addition of vocational education at the district's three junior high schools will aid in this effort and that it is good

Jeremiah Crise:
Incumbent

the classes will be coeducational. He would also like to see the Elementary Vocational Education (Project EVE) program continued.

Crise said he hopes some legal means will be established in the near future to obtain cash or land donations from developers to help offset the tax impact of their projects on local schools. The school district currently negotiates informally with developers except in Buffalo Grove where the village two years ago enacted a resolution requiring the donations.

"There should be some legal way of getting donations," Crise said. "I'm a stickler for ethics."

Crise feels citizen committees or advisory groups should be initiated by residents themselves when parents feel changes in school operations are needed.

He also favors appointing advisory groups to provide input to the school board on particular projects.

"Citizen groups should be formed when there is a specific job to do," he said. "I think we've done that in the past and that's what has made the district successful. Citizens of the district are our main source of information."

CRISE FEELS there is a good, working relationship between the school board and Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill.

"An organization is only as good as its

Because of the building slowdown, in the district, Crise does not feel the school board will be in a position soon of having to cut the budget. However, if money became tight, he said he would trim the amount of money spent on programs last.

On the subjection of teacher negotiations, Crise said he thinks it is better to conduct closed sessions because "too many opinions are formed when contract information is made public in bits and pieces."

A former president and secretary of the Dist. 21 school board, Crise 43, is employed as superintendent of the fidelity and surety department of St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. He has two children in local schools.

Carol Karzen: More input is needed from community

Evaluate. Recommend. Implement. These are the three things that Carol Karzen feels every school board member should do before voting on a certain item.

Mrs. Karzen is seeking one of the two three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board against incumbents Jeremiah Crise and Jack Lane, and newcomer Alberts Vigants.

The Buffalo Grove residents feels she is qualified to sit on the school board because — she has children in school; is a clinical psychologist; has a Bachelor of Science degree in Liberal Arts from Northwestern University and a Master of Science degree from Loyola University and she is an artist.

The candidate also sees three main issues in this election. They are:

- Community involvement.
- Financial priorities.
- Development of human potential.

MRS. KARZEN SAID that the community should have more input into the district. She said residents should have an opportunity to evaluate what is going on in the district and make input in the way of recommendations back to the board. The board would then be able to implement the recommendations if they see fit.

She said she does not see this input to the board and feels that this may be a reason for the lack of people attending board meetings. As of her interview, Mrs. Karzen had attended only one school board meeting but said she has reviewed the minutes of such meetings for the last year.

She feels the same citizen input should be made on financial priorities. At the coffees and teas that she has attended during the campaign, Mrs. Karzen told those in attendance two things: "These are my priorities — What are yours?"

She also said less importance should be placed on non-educational spending and more on items that would benefit the students of the district.

Carol Karzen: caucus backed

Mrs. Karzen cited the board's approval of spending $7,500 for a landscaping master plan. She said this money should have been directed to the district's learning center rather than landscaping.

HER MAIN ISSUE, however, is the development of human potential, to see each child development along the broadest possible approach. She would like to see some of the programs currently in Lake County Dist. 96 implemented in Dist. 21. That district operates under the Individually Guided Education.

The only caucus-endorsed candidate in the election, Mrs. Karzen refused comment on whether the Dist. 21 board is controlled by Supt. Kenneth Gill as some caucus members have charged. "I don't want to see in print 'Carol Karzen says Dist. 21 board is a rubber stamp board,'" she said in explaining her refusal to comment.

Mrs. Karzen also originally had no comment about the Dist. 21 Caucus, but later said it's better than anything the district currently has to evaluate candidates and until someone can come up with a better idea, she sees it as a good community organization.

The caucus became an issue in the Dist. 21 election when it endorsed Mrs. Karzen as the only qualified candidate and turned down incumbents Crise and Lane. Vigants did not appear before the caucus.

Jack Lane: Growth over, time for new educational ideas

Jack Lane believes the next five to 10 years will be "the most exciting Dist. 21 has ever seen." The Arlington Heights incumbent school board member is running for a second three-year term because he wants to be in on the action.

Lane feels that because the enrollment in the district is stabilizing and no new schools will be needed for awhile, the school board will be able to concentrate on implementing new educational programs.

"The opportunity of developing educational programs is fantastic if the money holds out," Lane said recently in a Herald interview. Consumer education or the junior high school level is one of the programs Lane would like to see added to the curriculum.

LANE ALSO FEELS the slowdown in school construction will allow the district to upgrade the teacher pay scale and provide more in-service training.

"Salaries in Dist. 21 are not as high as in some surrounding districts," he said. "We could give them a substantial raise this year, but salaries will go up in the other districts, too, so they may still be behind. This is probably one reason why we don't have too many men teachers. But I think it's a workable area and we're going to progress."

Lane said he would like to see teacher contract negotiations conducted publicly. The sessions were open two years ago, but closed last year and this year.

Lane has been criticized for his poor attendance at school board meetings in the past. He has missed the majority of meetings in the past year.

HOWEVER, Lane said his work schedule has recently been revised and he feels he will be able to attend all meetings in the future and devote the necessary time to school board business. He is presently sales manager and a salesman for G. E. Mack.

Jack Lane:
incumbent

"Had the change in my job not occurred, I wouldn't be running," he said. Lane added that if his workload should increase again to the point that it interferes with serving on the school board, he will resign.

Commenting on the relationship between the school board and Supt. Kenneth Gill, Lane said, "I don't think any member on the board would hesitate to question Gill or any member of the staff. This is not a rubber stamp board. Maybe people think it is and that impression probably comes from our dependence on the administration."

LANE'S GOALS in the next three years include implementing the new vocational education programs at the district's three junior high schools and adopting better methods of evaluating student study habits. He also would like to see more in-service workshops for teachers to help them "make children better-equipped to live in this changing society."

In addition, he would like to see more community involvement and input to the school board from local PTA and PTO groups.

Lane is the father of four children who presently attend Dist. 21 schools.

Arthur Vogelgesang:

and I'm in favor of changes, but I think there's no harm done if children don't get a vocational education at the grammar school level."

THE CANDIDATE said he likes the concept of a learning resource center because it offers students more than just "seeing and doing." It also provides them practical application.

He also says he favors some means of testing children because it offers an indication of where their interests lie and how students are doing in school. Vogelgesang adds that testing should be used as an indicator but grades should not be used in lower levels "because grades are not impressive to young children."

Vogelgesang believes teacher contract negotiations should be open to the public to allow people the opportunity to know what's going on. He also feels it is better to have a professional negotiator bargain for the board because "The board and the teachers have to work together and having a third party can help to avoid personality conflicts."

The board should also leave the job of the day-to-day running of the schools in the hands of the administration, Vogelgesang says. "The board picks the administration so it should have confidence in it and work together."

AS A BOARD member Vogelgesang would work to represent the children and people of the district. "It's important for the board to consider what people have to say about an issue but sometimes they become unreasonable."

Communicating with district residents should be a high priority of the

Arthur Vogelgesang:
newcomer

board, according to Vogelgesang. "There's probably too much apathy in the schools as far as participation goes. I think the board's newsletter is a good way to communicate with the people as well as the newspapers," he said.

Citizen advisory groups to study specific problems might also be a means of involving the community in district affairs, the candidate believes.

Problems the district will face in the future, Vogelgesang says, will include decreasing enrollment and funding. "We may have to rent space to help support the schools but I would consider many alternatives before I would go along with closing a school because of falling enrollment."

The candidate also is against closing schools to deal with the problem of declining enrollment because it would force an increase in class size which he is strongly against.

He admits he has no solution for dealing with the problem because, "It's hard to come up with a concrete answer."

Robert Novy:

said. "Citizens groups are important and we should consider what they have to say. The board's information should be blended with information from citizens' groups but the board should never make the group think they have come up with something the board didn't want."

Although citizen input in the decision-making process is important, Novy feels final actions and determinations should be left with the board. "We are not on the board to win popularity contests," he said.

According to Novy, the major concern facing the board within the next three years will be maintaining stable finances in the face of declining enrollment. "People don't seem to realize that when the enrollment goes down we lose state aid. We're going to have to find ways to supplement our finances," he said.

Among ways to do this are the sale of unused district property, renting vacant rooms and holding the line on supplies, Novy says.

"I would not be in favor of cutting programs again," Novy says. "If we see a deficit coming, we should study the number of attendance centers we have and determine what the cost of operating them is."

ANY CONSIDERATION of program cuts, however, should be made with involvement from staff and the community Novy said. "We should support programs that develop a sense of spirit or pride in the school. These programs like band and MAD (music, art and drama), are worthwhile and they cost very little."

Robert Novy:
Incumbent

Novy believes the administration should be in charge of running the schools because that is its job. "When the administration isn't doing its job it reflects badly on the board," he said.

The candidate also thinks teachers in the district have an important job and should be in a "devoted and dedicated" way. "We have to be fair with our teachers and keep their pay scale commensurate with other districts, but because of our size, we can probably never have their scale on the top."

Teachers are vital to the district, Novy said because they can have a lasting effect on students. "Teachers, principals and all children can affect eternity because education never stops."

Alberts Vigants: His concern — early childhood education

"Everybody should have an opportunity to be on the school board. I'm just a plain citizen and that's what I'm running on," said Alberts Vigants of Buffalo Grove.

Vigants is seeking one of two available three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board in the April 13 election.

As the father of three pre-schoolers, Vigants is concerned about early childhood education and would like to see pre-kindergarten classes adopted as part of the Dist. 21 curriculum. He suggested seeking state and federal funds to help underwrite the cost of such classes.

Vigants is also interested in promoting a freer flow of information from the school board to the community.

Citizens' groups could be valuable to Alberts Vigants:

newcomer

the school board, Vigants said, and should be used as much as possible to provide input from district residents on school matters.

Vigants suggested establishing a committee of parents and teachers, for example, to review textbooks under consideration before books are adopted for use in the district. Local PTA, PTO and PTC groups, he said, could provide people to aid in similar projects also.

Commenting on the practice of requiring housing developers to contribute land or cash to help offset the impact of their projects on local schools, Vigants said he doesn't feel it is fair to single out builders.

"I don't see the reasoning behind it," he said. "I don't know why builders should be assessed if you're not going to ask for money from all the other business people, too."

Vigants said he feels referendums are

Testimony in water rate hike plea ends

Testimony in the request of Citizens Utilities Co. to raise sewer and water rates was wrapped up Monday. A ruling by the Illinois Commerce Commission is expected to be handed down in August.

Citizens, an Addison-based firm, is seeking to raise utility rates for the New Town section of Mount Prospect and the Waycinden Park subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township near Des Plaines.

Duane A. Feurer, an attorney representing the Mount Prospect homeowners, said after the 3 1/2-hour session, "I'm happy with how it's going so far. What the commission is going to do in August is anybody's guess."

Citizens is attempting to raise water rates from $3 to $6 a month, and minimum sewer rates from $4.60 to $7 a month.

Monday's testimony consisted of cross examination by Citizens of two witnesses called by objectors to the rate hike. Several residents who testified earlier about utility service were not recalled for cross examination, though Citizens reserved the right to question them later.

In the next phase of the four-month old hearings, the ICC staff will prepare a report of its findings, incorporating data provided by both the firm and the objectors during their testimony.

The staff report will be cross examined by both the pro and anti-rate increase sides May 7, and staff rebuttal is scheduled for May 21. The staff will then prepare its final recommendations for the five-member ICC board.

1974 may be year big profits return to Arlington Park

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track officials are holding their breath in anticipation of what they hope will be their best racing season in five years.

Choice summer racing dates, a better breed of horses and top drawer jockeys are all being counted on to put some glitter back on the name Arlington Park, which has been beset with sagging attendance and falling profits during its past several seasons.

The situation has grown so critical that last November, Arlington Park Race Track Pres. Jack Loomie told the Illinois Racing Board, "For the first time, we seriously question, from a business viewpoint, whether we can continue to operate our racing facilities."

"We have undertaken a feasibility study as to the practicality of continuing to run race tracks whose assessments continue to rise and whose revenues continue to fall, rather than to develop the real estate on which they stand," Loomie told the racing board.

LAST WEEK he announced that the Richards Group of Illinois, an Oak Brook development company, has been hired to prepare a master plan for the track's 500-acre site.

Total revenue dropped some $4.6 million between 1969 and 1973, and net profit was down almost $2 million, Loomie reported.

The implication is that 1974 is more than just another year in Arlington Park's 47-year history. The future of the giant horse racing plant could rise or fall with this season's fortunes.

But this year, track officials are confident they can turn things around.

"It should be our best season since 1968," says William A. Thayer Jr., general manager and vice president of Arlington Park.

Though the gates at Arlington won't open until June 3 (the meeting continues through Sept. 7), Chicago's thoroughbred horse racing season begins next Friday at Sportsman's Park.

BUT MANY of the horses that will be stabled at Arlington this year won't just be making the short hop from Sportsman's. They are scheduled to arrive from the blue grass state of Kentucky where racing ends the Saturday before Arlington Park's Monday opener.

"Many trainers who have not raced at Arlington Park in the past few years will be back for the 1974 season," says Edward McKinsey, the track's new racing secretary.

Among them are two Kentucky Derby winning trainers — Henry Forrest and Lloyd Gentry. The former trained Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King and Derby winner Forward Pass. Gentry saddled the 1967 Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

On June 30 last year, Arlington Park was hosted by the appearance of 1973's superhorse, Secretariat, fresh from his Triple Crown triumph.

THIS YEAR, a $100,000 stakes race

named in his honor will be held on Saturday, June 29. The Secretariat Handicap, a mile-and-one-sixteenth grass race for three-year-olds, could very possibly attract this year's Derby winner to Arlington Park, Thayer said.

Another feature of Secretariat's appearance — an open infield at Arlington Park — may be repeated for some of the bigger weekend races this year, according to track spokesman Tom Rivera.

The grass area would be open to spectators anxious to combine picnicking or sunbathing with their race watching.

The Secretariat Handicap is one of five major races scheduled at Arlington this summer.

Purses of $100,000 added will be offered for the American Derby on Saturday, Aug. 24, and the Arlington Handicap on Saturday, Sept. 7.

The Arlington-Washington Futurity, set for Labor Day, is expected to gross $200,000 this year and will be the Midwest's richest horse race.

The Lassie, with an estimated purse of $100,000, will be held the Saturday of the Labor Day weekend.

SUMMER GASOLINE supplies also figure to play an important part in track officials' hopes for the upcoming season.

Earlier this year, Loomie identified gas shortages as the single biggest threat to race track attendance.

Even if gasoline is available, Rivera says he expects more fans will use the new, Arlington Park train depot.

A new electronic tote board has been installed at the track and a number of maintenance improvements are being made in the backstretch, in line with the recommendations of an administrative task force appointed last October by Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson.

Improvements include planting a number of trees in the stable area, the construction of some new comfort stations for track employees, and the painting of some barns and dormitories.

Concession prices for track patrons probably will not be increased, Rivera says, and the $1.50 general admission fee is unchanged.

"All in all, things look very, very bright," says Thayer.

Indeed it would seem that if Arlington Park is ever going to reestablish its claim to being one of the five top tracks in the country, 1974 must be the year.

New site sought for teen center

The Arlington Heights Youth Council has formed a committee to find a new home for the Basement drop-in center, now located in the basement of Olympic Park.

The present location has drawn fire from persons using the Olympic Park swimming pool, claiming the youths congregate in front of the building and harass and intimidate younger children and parents.

Gary Knudson, youth outreach worker at the Basement, said the present home was not compatible with other park activities and was not designed for a youth council drop-in center.

Richard Hammerli, council member, suggested the old frame house, now used as a resale shop by the women's auxiliary of Northwest Community Hospital, could be converted for use as a teen center. The house, a block south of the library, is on village-owned land set aside for the proposed Cultural Center.

FRANK CHARLTON, village health director, said the village administration has already expressed opposition to the Hammerli proposal. He said village manager L. A. Hanson had termed the house "unsafe" for a teen center and recommended that it be razed.

Hammerli said he felt the building was "worth the investment" and "could be rehabilitated for a reasonable amount of money." He said the site was good for a teen center because it had no immediate neighbors who might object to the youths using it.

Charlton agreed on this point. "There is no question about it. The location is good."

He pointed out the village has already made office space available to the outreach workers in a house at 115 W. Fremont.

HAMMERLI ALSO suggested a vacant grocery store was available for $60,000 a year. He said it could be used for a full teen center, with dances, pool tables as well as counseling facilities. He said "it could pay for itself, if the teens supported it."

A third Hammerli proposal called for high school industrial arts classes building a teen center with material provided, at cost, by local contractors. This, according to Hammerli, could be done on land provided by the village.

The study commission, which includes chairman Thomas Martin, Maryann Loris and Ellen Rosenfeld, will meet with the outreach workers to evaluate the women's auxiliary facility and other sites. They are scheduled to report back to the full council in May at the next session.

1 testifies on incorporation; hearing recessed to May 21

One witness, a land surveyor, took the stand Monday as testimony began in the hearing to determine whether residents of unincorporated Prospect Heights will be allowed to vote to create a City of Prospect Heights.

Testimony by Robert Carlson of Wheeling, however, will be the only testimony heard until May 21. The hearing was continued to that date and not the previously agreed upon April 29 because of the unavailability of Jack Siegel, attorney for the objecting Village of Arlington Heights.

Carlson testified to the proposed municipality's boundaries. He also said the area of the proposed town would be under the four-square-mile limit. Carlson was a witness for the incorporation petitioners, the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn.

Six of the seven attorneys representing objectors cross examined Carlson. Their questions dealt with Carlson's qualifications as an "expert witness," the lack of a field survey on the proposed incorporation area and the inclusion of areas east of the Camp McDonald-Wolf roads intersection.

IN THE QUESTIONING, it was pointed out that a person could travel to Pal-

ARMED WITH SIGNS, Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have banded together to protest the further destruction of a grove of stately old trees. The trees are being felled on the northwestern boundary of Harper College to clear the way for the extension of Euclid Road.

STRONG WINDS prevented crews from finishing the clearing of a grove of trees Monday to make way for the extension of Euclid Avenue. Instead, the crews cleared a grove of small trees while citizens banded together across the street to save the larger trees off Roselle Road.

Homeowners, students cry: 'Woodsmen, spare that tree'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine homeowners and Harper College students have joined forces to save a grove of trees scheduled to be chopped down to make way for the Euclid Road extension.

Several old trees off Roselle Road on the northwestern boundary of Harper College were chopped down Saturday before residents of the Hunting Ridge subdivision were alerted to what was happening. Approximately 20 residents gathered on the site Saturday to block the further felling of the trees and Monday they were joined by Harper students.

Both students and residents have vowed to stay at the site as long as necessary to save the trees.

"It's one of the nicest places in the area," said Robert Hayhurst, Harper student body president. He said students gather at the site frequently for picnics, concerts and just to read and relax.

Residents say six trees approximately 150 years old have been chopped down and 11 more are scheduled to go.

RONNY LOVELL, working for the Cook County Highway Department on the road project, said his orders are to cut down a total of 11 of the older trees and eight of them are already down.

Strong winds prevented the crews from chopping down the remaining three trees yesterday.

Protesters hope to get the road moved 75 feet to the north where there is a clearing.

"We want Euclid but we want the trees too," said Betty Strother, a homeowner.

County highway officials say they are doing their best to save the trees but have to work within their right-of-way. Harper College dedicated the land in question to the county without charge in consideration for the construction of the Euclid Road extension.

The 1.7-mile extension of Euclid Avenue from just west of Plum Grove Rd. to Roselle Road will provide an east-west access to the Harper campus. A $2.5 million contract on the project was awarded to Milburn Bros. in March. The road extension is scheduled for completion in 1975.

Only one of the trees felled had any evidence of decay and the others were in beautiful shape, according to Lovell. He said the orders were to chop the remaining three trees when the weather permitted but to pull off the job if there was any trouble.

2 incumbents, 2 newcomers seek Dist. 21 board posts

Jeremiah Crise: Expand science curriculum

Expanding the number and kinds of science offerings in Dist. 21 schools is one of the goals Arlington Heights incumbent Jeremiah Crise has in seeking a third three-year term on the school board.

Crise, 611 W. Hintz Rd., believes his six years of experience on the board makes him qualified for the position and he said he has a desire to continue to serve the community.

Crise said he also wants to continue his work with the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC). One of the founders of the cooperative, Crise is currently chairman of the building committee for the Samuel A. Kirk Center in Palatine.

BESIDES INCREASING science courses offered in the district, particularly in the areas of chemistry and physics, Crise said he favors exposing children to as many occupations as possible. He feels the addition of vocational education at the district's three junior high schools will aid in this effort and that it is good the classes will be coeducational. He would also like to see the Elementary Vocational Education (Project EVE) program continued.

Crise said he hopes some legal means will be established in the near future to obtain cash or land donations from developers to help offset the tax impact of their projects on local schools. The school district currently negotiates informally with developers except in Buffalo Grove where the village two years ago enacted a resolution requiring the donations.

Crise feels citizen committees or advisory groups should be initiated by residents themselves when parents feel changes in school operations are needed.

He also favors appointing advisory groups to provide input to the school board on particular projects.

"Citizen groups should be formed when there is a specific job to do," he said. "I think we've done that in the past and that's what has made the district successful. Citizens of the district are our main source of information."

CRISE FEELS there is a good, working relationship between the school board and Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill.

"An organization is only as good as its

Because of the building slowdown in the district, Crise does not feel the school board will be in a position soon of having to cut the budget. However, if money became tight, he said he would trim the amount of money spent on programs last.

On the subject of teacher negotiations, Crise said he thinks it is better to conduct closed sessions because "too many opinions are formed when contract information is made public in bits and pieces."

A former president and secretary of the Dist. 21 school board, Crise 43, is employed as superintendent of the fidelity and surety department of St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. He has two children in local schools.

Carol Karzen: More input is needed from community

Evaluate. Recommend. Implement. These are the three things that Carol Karzen feels every school board member should do before voting on a certain item.

Mrs. Karzen is seeking one of the two three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board against incumbents Jeremiah Crise and Jack Lane, and newcomer Alberts Vigants.

The Buffalo Grove residents feels she is qualified to sit on the school board because — she has children in school; is a clinical psychologist; has a Bachelor of Science degree in Liberal Arts from Northwestern University and a Master of Science degree from Loyola University and she is an artist.

The candidate also sees three main issues in this election. They are:

- Community involvement.
- Financial priorities.
- Development of human potential.

MRS. KARZEN SAID that the community should have more input into the district. She said residents should have an opportunity to evaluate what is going on in the district and make input in the way of recommendations back to the board. The board would then be able to implement the recommendations if they see fit.

She said she does not see this input to the board and feels that this may be a reason for the lack of people attending board meetings. As of her interview, Mrs. Karzen had attended only one school board meeting but said she has reviewed the minutes of such meetings for the last year.

She feels the same citizen input should be made on financial priorities. At the coffees and teas that she has attended during the campaign, Mrs. Karzen told those in attendance two things: "These are my priorities — What are yours?"

She also said less importance should be placed on non-educational spending and more on items that would benefit the students of the district.

Carol Karzen: caucus backed

Mrs. Karzen cited the board's approval of spending $7,500 for a landscaping master plan. She said this money should have been directed to the district's learning center rather than landscaping.

HER MAIN ISSUE, however, is the development of human potential, to see each child development along the broadest possible approach. She would like to see some of the programs currently in Lake County Dist. 96 implemented in Dist. 21. That district operates under the Individually Guided Education.

The only caucus-endorsed candidate in the election, Mrs. Karzen refused comment on whether the Dist. 21 board is controlled by Supt. Kenneth Gill as some caucus members have charged. "I don't want to see in print 'Carol Karzen says Dist. 21 board is a rubber stamp board,'" she said in explaining her refusal to comment.

Mrs. Karzen also originally had no comment about the Dist. 21 Caucus, but later said it's better than anything the district currently has to evaluate candidates and until someone can come up with a better idea, she sees it as a good community organization.

The caucus became an issue in the Dist. 21 election when it endorsed Mrs. Karzen as the only qualified candidate and turned down incumbents Crise and Lane. Vigants did not appear before the caucus.

Jack Lane: Growth over, time for new educational ideas

Jack Lane believes the next five to 10 years will be "the most exciting" Dist. 21 has ever seen." The Arlington Heights incumbent school board member is running for a second three-year term because he wants to be in on the action.

Lane feels that because the enrollment in the district is stabilizing and no new schools will be needed for awhile, the school board will be able to concentrate on implementing new educational programs.

"The opportunity of developing educational programs is fantastic if the money holds out," Lane said recently in a Herald interview. Consumer education on the junior high school level is one of the programs Lane would like to see added to the curriculum.

LANE ALSO FEELS the slowdown in school construction will allow the district to upgrade the teacher pay scale and provide more in-service training.

"Salaries in Dist. 21 are not as high as in some surrounding districts," he said. "We could give them a substantial raise this year, but salaries will go up in the other districts, too, so they may still be behind. This is probably one reason why we don't have too many men teachers. But I think it's a workable area and we're going to progress."

Lane said he would like to see teacher contract negotiations conducted publicly. The sessions were open two years ago, but closed last year and this year.

Lane has been criticized for his poor attendance at school board meetings in the past. He has missed the majority of meetings in the past year.

HOWEVER, Lane said his work schedule has recently been revised and he feels he will be able to attend all meetings in the future and devote the necessary time to school board business. He is presently sales manager and a salesman for G. E. Mack.

Jack Lane: incumbent

"Had the change in my job not occurred, I wouldn't be running," he said. Lane added that if his workload should increase again to the point that it interferes with serving on the school board, he will resign.

Commenting on the relationship between the school board and Supt. Kenneth Gill, Lane said, "I don't think any member on the board would hesitate to question Gill or any member of the staff. This is not a rubber stamp board. Maybe people think it is and that impression probably comes from our dependence on the administration."

LANE'S GOALS in the next three years include implementing the new vocational education programs at the district's three junior high schools and adopting better methods of evaluating student study habits. He also would like to see more in-service workshops for teachers to help them "make children better-equipped to live in this changing society."

In addition, he would like to see more community involvement and input to the school board from local PTA and PTO groups.

Lane is the father of four children who presently attend Dist. 21 schools.

This is because Wheeling only annexed half the width of Wolf and Camp McDonald roads near their intersection.

Prior to the testimony, stipulations were entered into the record in which Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Northbrook acknowledged no land incorporated by them was the subject of any pending annexation within the proposed boundaries. Arlington Heights also made that stipulation but added that three lots, not now contiguous to Arlington Heights, are the subject of pre-annexation agreements to be consummated when they are contiguous. Two of the lots are on West McDonald Road and the third is on Waterman Avenue, south of Willow Road.

Wheeling township annual meet tonight

Wheeling Township will hold its annual meeting today at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

The Board of Auditors will consider federal revenues — sharing allocations of approximately $200,000 for mental health services and programs and $9,000 for an additional truck for the township highway commissioner.

To date the township has received more than $250,000 of revenue-sharing money and anticipates about $200,000 for the 1974-75 fiscal year. The township is in the process of drafting a revenue-sharing budget of approximately $470,000.

Revenue sharing, which began in 1972, is a program that local taxing bodies are given federal money to spend as they wish under loose federal guidelines.

Alberts Vigants: His concern — early childhood education

"Everybody should have an opportunity to be on the school board. I'm just a plain citizen and that's what I'm running on," said Alberts Vigants of Buffalo Grove.

Vigants is seeking one of two available three-year terms on the Dist. 21 school board in the April 13 election.

As the father of three pre-schoolers, Vigants is concerned about early childhood education and would like to see pre-kindergarten classes adopted as part of the Dist. 21 curriculum. He suggested seeking state and federal funds to help underwrite the cost of such classes.

Vigants is also interested in promoting a freer flow of information from the school board to the community.

Citizens' groups could be valuable to the school board, Vigants said, and should be used as much as possible to provide input from district residents on school matters.

Vigants suggested establishing a committee of parents and teachers, for example, to review textbooks under consideration before books are adopted for use in the district. Local PTA, PTO and PTC groups, he said, could provide people to aid in similar projects also.

Commenting on the practice of requiring housing developers to contribute land or cash to help offset the impact of their projects on local schools, Vigants said he doesn't feel it is fair to single out builders.

"I don't see the reasoning behind it," he said. "I don't know why builders should be assessed if you're not going to ask for money from all the other business people, too."

Vigants said he feels referendums are a more just way of providing new schools that become necessary as the student population of the district increases.

Vigants feels schools should provide children with as many and as varied experiences as possible. He believes a well-rounded curriculum is essential and would like to see more music and art classes in Dist. 21.

A resident of the village since 1969, Vigants is employed as an electronic manufacturing engineer with Simpson Electric Co. in Elgin.

Vigants received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Minnesota and the Milwaukee School of Engineering in 1959. He, his wife, Ausma, and their children, live at 760 MacArthur Dr.
